Mrs. Edison in the South. Mr. and Mrs. Ford Close By. A Road of Solid Coral. Koreshan's Concave Earth.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 20.

THIS IS written, looking out between tall royal palm trees at the edge of the Caloosahatchee which, just here, runs into the Gulf of Mexico, performing its "priestlike task of pure ablution" along our gulf states shores and the farther shores of Mexico.

It is an interesting drive of 150 miles, along the Tamiami Trail, running 40 miles in a straight line west from Miami, then north along the edge of the gulf to this quiet, beautiful spot, where Thomas A. Edison lived through many winters before his death, with Henry Ford's small frame cottage next door.

THIS IS the first time Henry Ford has come to Fort Myers since Edison's death. He did not want to be reminded so acutely of his old friend's departure.

THOMAS A. EDISON'S widow, Mrs. Mina Miller Edison, arrived here with her brother yesterday to spend the rest of the winter at the place bought by her husband forty-five years ago.

Henry Ford's place, bought twenty years ago because it was next door to Edison, is very old for Florida; tall orange trees grow right against the house and all around it.

MR. FORD is in his garage, in a little machine shop, working at a small electric-driven lathe with innumerable attachments, on some new idea for a Diesel engine.

Says Mr. Ford:

"The Diesel has got to come.

"I do not know or care in just what shape, but it is our business to find out."

Mr. Ford, who is glad that the government is interesting itself in Diesel engines, urges parents to have their children learn to use their hands, work with tools and machinery, learn to play a musical instrument, instead of merely using machines and listening to music made by others.

HE TAKES his own advice and his hands, that will be 71 years old next July, are kept working every day. He knows machinery and how to make it.

HENRY FORD has dismissed the depression from his mind. Said he:

"It is ended, not for this or that one of 100 reasons, but because the people have got tired of it. When they get really tired of a thing, they go to work and end it.

If every man will do the thing that he knows how to do, as well as he possibly can do it, there will be no more trouble, in Mr. Ford's opinion. He believes that President Roosevelt has made no mistake thus far, and says:

"The American dollar will always be a good dollar and a real dollar, not a sixty-cent dollar either. You can no more compare our money with other money than you can compare our country with other countries. The value of money depends on what it will buy—the dollar will always buy anything."

The antics of gold, rising and falling, rushing in here, when we go "off" it, amuse Mr. Ford. He never had any high opinion of gold. Men, ideas and work are what count, for him.

YOU COME on the Tamiami Trail, a perfect road across the soft lands of Florida's Everglades, from the Atlantic to the Gulf.

Building roads in Florida is a simple process. Just below the tropical soil, the steam shovels find white coral rock unlimited in depth, soft enough to scoop up, hardening in the air.

The shovels dig a canal, which fills with water, helps drainage, and the pure white coral rock spread out along the roadway, mixed with oil, and rolled, produces a smooth highway that grows harder as time passes.

You make good time on that smooth coral road, with its perfect grip on the tires. Mr. Sam Murray, of Miami, who drives, remarks:

"You do not notice any special speed or vibration, do you?"

And you do not, until you see that the needle on the big speedometer has rolled around beyond and as far as it can go below the ninety-mile mark, highest on the speedometer.

That seems a little fast, in a small car, with a canal on the right, deep marsh on the left. A wheel might possibly come off or a spoke break. By request, Mr. Murray reluctantly drops down to seventy.

THE BIRDS that in millions inhabit the Everglades are grateful to white men for digging that canal as long as Florida is wide.

They might thank the white men, also, for establishing a bird sanctuary, in which no bird may be killed, reaching one hundred miles north and one hundred miles south, on either side of the canal, but they do not know about the sanctuary, or why it is that even little Seminole Indian boys, fishing beside them at the canal's edge, never hurt them.

YOU SEE many thousands of birds, scores of different kinds, tiny white cranes, enormous blue cranes, sitting "with eternal lids apart" waiting for the sign of a small fish or frog, or meditating, on one leg, eyes closed, when they have eaten as many frogs and fish as they can hold.

Here and there you pass an Indian house, at the roadside, but that is always a "tourist Indian house," purely commercial. The real Indian huts, temporary

LINK HOOVER IN AIR MAIL CONTRACTS

Senators Quiz Brown On TWA Bid for Route Here

Air Mail Developments:

1—Senate investigators attempted to show that the White House had taken a hand in the awarding of air mail contracts while President Hoover was in office. They also questioned former Postmaster General Brown on the award of the Newark-Pittsburgh contract to TWA over Pittsburgh Airways.

2—The Army fliers braved perilous weather and carried the mail through, defeating even "Hell's Stretch" across the Allegheny Mountains in flights east and west.

3—Transcontinental and Western Airways announced curtailment of passenger and express service and furloughs for all personnel.

4—The House Postoffice Committee began drafting a new basic air mail law designed to end subsidies.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Senate air mail investigators attempted to show today that former President Hoover ordered a Justice Department investigation of the bid by the Avigation Company in August, 1930, for a middle transcontinental air route.

Chairman Black, of the investigating committee, produced records purporting to show the White House ordered the inquiry within 24 hours after the bid was submited.

Former Postmaster General Brown, on the stand, said he was "thousands of miles away" at the time and knew nothing about it.

The route later was awarded to the Transcontinental and Western Air. Brown said he was back

Stuff and Nonsense At Washington

THERE is a certain insincerity, a certain bias, a certain extravagance of statement and looseness of innuendo about the utterances of the committee investigating the commercial airplane contracts which do not reflect any particular credit upon the committee or inspire any particular confidence in the minds of the public.

Take the charges against Mr. Lindbergh as an example.

Here is a man who is a credit to the country and an idol of the public, and who should not be defamed or idly accused.

The inference has been drawn from the utterances of the committee—the intention has been apparently that these inferences should be drawn—that Mr. Lindbergh had made in some manner open to criticism, $2,000,000 in airplane stock and stock speculation.

A careful investigation of the facts proves that this is in no sense true.

Mr. Lindbergh received $250,000 as a bonus for signing the contract, and as compensation for services and for the value of his knowledge and experience.

He immediately invested this amount in stock of the company.

There is obviously nothing excessive in the amount or at all improper in the method of compensation.

THE PROCESS of Mr. Lindbergh's detractors is to assume that Mr. Lindbergh might have held the stock until it reached the highest peak of its value in 1929, and might have sold out at that highest peak, and might have in consequence realized something like $2,000,000.

But no one has brought forward any evidence that he did proceed in this manner and did realize $2,000,000.

But even if he did, what of it?

Every intelligent human being in the United States realizes that if people had had wisdom enough to sell their possessions at the very summit of peak prices in 1929, they would have realized many times what those possessions are worth

INFIRMARY FIRE KILLS 10 WOMEN

Kin of Civil War Vets Trapped in Beds By Brookville Blaze

By WALTON WOODS
Staff Correspondent.

BROOKVILLE, Pa., Feb. 20.—Ten aged, feeble women, womenfolk of Civil War veterans, were killed early today in a burst of flame that reduced their hospital quarters to ashes.

Some blind, all infirm, they died in their beds, or while groping in rooms and corridors for exits screened by fire and smoke.

The structure, condemned by the state as a fire trap, burned like tinder under a driving wind with the temperature outside at zero. It was the infirmary of the Pennsylvania Memorial Home.

ONLY FIVE SAVED

Only five of the 15 inmates in the building escaped. One of those was burned. One of those who died was a resident of Verona, near Pittsburgh.

The infirmary had settled down for its usual quiet night when, at 12:15 a. m., Mrs. Ella Hulings, the night nurse, responding to a patient's bell, smelled smoke in one of the three wings of the old, one-story frame building.

Almost in an instant, fire burst into the corridor as Mrs. Hulings ran to the room of the patient, Mrs. Martha Moore, 74, of Baxter.

The nurse screamed for help and dashed into Mrs. Moore's room. The aged woman was stretched unconscious on the floor. The smoke was thick in the room, and down the corridor flames were crackling.

SCREAMS WARNING

Mrs. Hulings dashed from room to room, screaming. She dragged one aged patient into the corridor, and by then the smoke was so thick she was driven out.

Meanwhile, Nelson Mathers, janitor, who lives near the home, had seen the flames and ran to the

MOB FIGHTS TO HEAR TRIAL

Wife Declared Suicide Over Ill Health and Affair in South

Bob Soles spent uneasy hours in the witness chair today—hours in which he pictured himself as the understanding husband who forgave his wife's indiscretions, as the tortured martyr who was forced to sign a confession that he murdered attractive LaRoux Soles.

While noisy, mad hundreds fought in the Criminal Court lobbies to hear the prosperous McKeesporter's defense, Soles told his story of LaRoux' death—a story of suicide, prompted by her ill health and an affair with another man.

The ex-Army captain denied forcefully the details of the confession he made last October.

One thing he admitted—that when he came home he heard his wife moaning and went to the bathroom to read the funny paper. But, he explained, he thought she was merely suffering indigestion, didn't know she had shot herself just below the heart after writing a suicide note.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT

He told, too, of a previous suicid eattempt he thought LeRoux had made on a trip they made to Atlantic City a few weeks before the shooting.

And he gave his version of her affair with the mysterious William Sibley Martin—of how one morning he found her writhing on the floor of the living room in their fashionable Jenny Lind street home, of how he had picked her up, carried her to her bed, and heard about a letter she had received.

Q.—When did you first read the contents of the letter?

A.—After we were both in bed. She called my attention to a man named Martin.

Q.—What did she say?

A.—She said in a weak woment she had let hersedf go to Mr. Martin and both got sick (during the Miami visit six months before the shooting).

SOLES SMILES

At one time during his hours on the stand Soles smiled. This was when his counsel, O. K. Eaton, reading a letter from LaRoux to

2 BELOW SETS COLD RECORD

All cold weather records for this date were shattered today as the mercury plunged to 2 below zero in the official thermometer at the Weather Bureau and to 6 and 7 below in outlying districts.

Autoists found the going still dangerous today.

The previous low mark for February 20 was 1 below zero in 1885 and 1896. The coldest weather of this winter was 11 below February 9. Since that date the mercury has flirted with the zero mark several times.

Little hope of immediate relief was seen by Assistant Observer C. A. Belt. He predicted a minimum of between zero and 5 above for tonight. Slowly rising temperatures were indicated for tomorrow.

Water Main Breaks, Street Flooded

Penn avenue, near Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, was flooded from curb to curb today when a main of the Pennsylvania Water Company burst at Ross and Trenton avenues.

In the extreme cold the water quickly froze, converting Penn avenue into a sheet of ice for approximately half a block. Borough officials ordered sand spread over the icy stretch.

Exchange Hour Late in Opening Due to Blizzard

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—With New York literally snowbound, a blizzard of unparalleled intensity today forced a delay in the opening of the stock exchange.

The start was deferred from 10 until 11 o'clock. The New York Curb, Produce, Cotton and other commodity exchanges also deferred their openings.

All forms of transportation except the subway suffered one of the worst tie-ups since the legendary blizzard of 1888.

It was impossible for thousands of New Yorkers living in the boroughs outside of Manhattan to get to work. Seven or eight inches of snow fell during the night and was continuing today.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—(INS.)—Philadelphia today was digging out from under a four-inch layer of snow deposited by the worst blizzard in years.

Roosevelt Son Gets Black Eyes in Game

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 20.—(INS.)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Harvard freshman and son of the President, today nursed two black eyes and a sore nose.

He was struck accidentally across the face by a fellow-player during an informal squash game at the Harvard courts.

Storm Rips Lamp From White House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The 400-pound colonial lantern which has swung from the front portico of the White House for 22 years, under the lash of a winter gale, last night crashed to the porch floor. Valued at $1,000, it was wrecked.

SHIPS SINKING, RESCUE RUSHED

WINTHROP, Mass., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Coast Guard surfmen set up beach apparatus on Winthrop Beach today to attempt a rescue by breeches buoy of the crew of the steamship Northern Sword, pounding to pieces on the rocks of Winthrop Head, after it had sent out two SOS calls.

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The storm-wracked, leaking schooner Hope Leslie and her benumbed and weary crew of six were towed safely to Woods Hole this afternoon by two coast guard patrol boats after a furious struggle against a 60-mile gale, icefloes and gigantic seas.

4 FRICK MINES GET CHECKOFF

Open-shop agreements between the H. C. Frick Coke Company and two subsidiaries, and officers of the United Mine Workers of America as representatives of union miners were signed today affecting 5,000 men.

The contracts, while not outright recognition of the United Mine Workers, accepts the checkoff agreement for collection of union dues.

Philip Murray, international vice president, said he considered this union recognition.

The Frick mines in the agreement were the four in Fayette County at which union miners received the majority of votes at the recent election for workers' representation. Two operations of the National Mining Company in Mercer County and three of the Sharon Coal and Lime Stone Company also were included.

First announcement of the agreement was issued by Thomas Moses, president of the Frick company. Terms of the agreement were announced by Murray at the union headquarters. The agreements are the first ever reached between union representatives and the Frick interests, Murray said.

The agreements are based on the appalachian contract. The union will be permitted to continue organization work. Discrimination against union workers and officers is prohibited. The agreements, provided by the National Labor Board, continue through March 31.

Masaryk Scoffs At Nazi German Peril to Czechs

Editor's Note — The George Washington of his country — the 84-year-old President of Czechoslovakia, Thomas G. Masaryk—does not believe that war is coming in Europe. H. R. Knickerbocker gives President Masaryk's views in the eighth article of his series "Will War Come."

President Masaryk is well known in Pittsburgh. He visited here several times before and following the World War.

PRAGUE, Feb. 20.

"They tried it and lost."

The eighty-four-year-old President of Czechoslovakia, Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, let a sardonic chuckle punctuate his final words on the chances that Germany would again make war to realize her Pan-German aims.

He replied:

"They lost. That ought to be sufficient."

The President's state is uniquely his state. He actually created it. The aged philosopher-statesman is the Washington of Czechoslovakia, literally the Father of his Country. Today his nation, his child, feels that it has more to fear from the

HOUSE TO DEFY VETO ON BONUS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—A vote on the soldiers' bonus issue in the House was assured today despite President Roosevelt's announced intention of vetoing the bill if passed.

The vote became a certainty when a petition was signed by 145 members of the House to call from Ways and Means Committee the Patman Bill for payment of the $2,000,000,000 bonus.

The petition was compltted after Speaker Rainey of the House announced that he was authorized to voice the objections of President Roosevelt.

Democratic leaders of the House already have conceded that the measure will pass. It then will go to the Senate for action.

Conviction of Read In $11 Theft Upheld

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—(AP.)—The conviction of Alfred C. Read, Jr., on a charge of stealing $11 from Claire Windsor, actress, was upheld yesterday by the appellate department of the Superior Court.

Read is the central figure of a $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Mrs. Marion Read, his wife, against Miss Windsor. Mrs. Read was awarded $75,000 by a jury, but a new trial was granted.

Vets to Stage Last 'Review' for Albert

BRUSSELS, Feb. 20.—(INS.)—Although King Albert is dead, he still lives in the hearts of his people. The gallant soldier-king, who led his troops in battle during the World War, will hold a "final review" of his army tomorrow, it was announced today.

At their request, 10,000 veterans will pass before Albert's coffin, marching in their old war formations.

Labor Board Again Delays on Weirton

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The National Labor Board again postponed action on the Weirton Steel Company case, explaining that the unexpected absence of a board member from the city made it impossible to proceed. There was no indication when the decision would be made.

Board attaches said that reports that the board already had chosen a date for a new employe election in the steel plants were unfounded.

rescue. Townspeople gathered. The volunteer fire company was summoned.

Men dashed into the inferno, and five aged women, two on crutches, hobbled out with the rescuers' assistance.

Those who died were:

Sutley, Mrs. Helen, 75, of Tionesta, veteran's widow.

Showers, Mrs. Jenny, 94, Reynoldsville, veteran's widow.

Marvin, Mrs. Mary, 81, Verona, veteran's sister.

Moore, Miss Martha, 74, Baxter, veteran's daughter.

Perry, Miss Margaret, 76, Grove City, veteran's daughter.

Loveland, Mrs. Elizabeth, 76, Moscow, veteran's widow.

Bobst, Miss Christine, 64, Reading, veteran's daughter.

Roberts, Mrs. Florence, 84, Pleasantville, veteran's widow.

Gannon, Mrs. Mary, 80, Sunbury, veteran's widow.

The home, consisting of one other building besides the infirmary, is operated by the Pennsylvania Women's Relief Corps with state aid for the care of relatives of Civil War veterans.

FIVE WOMEN RESCUED

There were 15 women in the infirmary and 10 in the other building. Those who escaped were Mrs. Lavina McGrody, of Reynoldsville; Mrs. Mary Gresh, of Lititz; Miss Rebecca Gould, of Coolspring; Mrs. Cora Bruce, of DuBois, and Mrs. Diantha McFarland, of Clarion.

Mrs. Bruce, blind and crippled, was a heorine of the disaster. Despite her affliction, she did her best to rouse others, pounded at doors, struggled with fallen bodies she was unable to carry, and finally was pulled from the building when further rescue efforts were impossible.

Mrs. McGrody suffered burns on the head, but none of the others were injured.

BLINDED BY SMOKE

Mrs. Hulings said that when she first discovered the fire, smoke was pouring from a dressing room. She said:

"By the time I got there, the smoke was so dense I couldn't see what was burning. I screamed and ran to Mrs. Moore's room and tried to get her out. She was stretched on the floor. I think she died of fright.

"Still screaming, I ran to Mrs. Sutley's room and dragged her into the hall. Then some men came in and got her. I ran back to try to get Mrs. Moore out, but I couldn't."

Frozen water pipes and the combustible nature of the building balked efforts of the Brookville volunteer firemen to save the building.

BUILDING LONG CONDEMNED

Fire Chief R. F. Wetzel said the infirmary building had been condemned about six years ago as unsafe by the state fire marshal's office, but the time for its demolition had been extended while funds were sought for a new building.

The main building of the home was built 44 years ago. The infirmary, an 18-room structure, was built more recently.

A mass funeral for eight of the victims will be held tomorrow at the home. Burial will be made in the Brookville cemetery. The bodies of Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Sutley will be sent to their homes.

NIECE OF REED IN AUTO CRASH

Richard M. Smith, 20, of Greensburg, a University of Pittsburgh student, was in Montefiore Hospital today with a fractured skull suffered last night, police reported, when his car collided with a street car in front of Carnegie Institute.

In the car, police said, were Miss Matilda Reed, of 4900 Fifth avenue, a niece of United States Senator David A. Reed, and Robert Irwin, of 460 South Graham street. Neither was injured. The automobile skidded and sideswiped the trolley, according to police, who said the accident was unavoidable.

DOG WATCHES OVER SUICIDE

Leaving two suicide notes and his dog, "Pal," Harry Woodside, 50, of Hamilton road, Penn Township, took his life during the night in order to "find some true friends," according to a Coroner's report.

Pal was lying across the foot of his master's bed when he was found early today. A poison bottle and two notes were on a stand beside the bed.

The first note left a small trust fund for "Pal" and a second dog, Tiny, the rest of his property to Housekeeper Loretta Byrnes. The second, and later, left all to Miss Byrnes.

Apparently grieved by the recent death of a close friend, Woodside wrote in the last note, dated January 21, disposing of 20 shares of United States Steel stock, his house and property:

"This is going to be a happy night. I hope wherever I go I will find some true friends."

FIVE ON TRIAL IN VOTE FRAUD

Joseph W. Muldowney, brother of Congressman M. J. Muldowney and four other members of the election board of the Third District, Fourth Ward, were on trial on vote fraud charges in Federal Court today.

Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed told the jury the government would produce from 35 to 40 witnesses who would testify they had voted the straight Democratic ticket to prove that ballots had been falsified to favor Republican candidates. Some ballots bore phantom markings, Reed said.

John P. Wilson, clerk of the Prothonotary's office, produced records showing 356 ballots had been cast. Of these 317 were for Muldowney and 31 for Mrs. Anne E. Felix, Democratic nominee, who contested Muldowney's election.

In addition to Joseph Muldowney, who was judge of election, those on trial are William Maher and Mary Wagner, inspectors; Edward Baurhem and Francis Gunshall, clerks.

M'NAIR SEEKS HOUSING DATA

As a tag end to his eastern trip, Mayor McNair is going to have it out with Federal Housing Director Robert D. Kohn as to why housing projects of his friend George E. Evans aren't getting more consideration.

McNair decided to go to Washington late Thursday when he got a letter from Kohn advising that building projects from Pittsburgh weren't very satisfactory. He said it was evident Kohn didn't understand the Pittsburgh propositions for slum eradication. Four major projects have been submitted from this district.

STADTLANDER, ATTORNEY, DIES

Attorney William F. Stadtlander, 59, died early today in his residence, 3508 Perrysville avenue, North Side.

He had been ill and confined to bed for a month, suffering from a heart attack.

Mr. Stadtlander was born on the North Side and had lived there all his life. He was a member of the bar since 1904, having practiced in the office of ex-Gov. William A. Stone. He was graduated from Phillip's Exeter Academy and the University of Pittsburgh. He was a member of the State Legislature from 1916 to 1932, but lost as a candidate for re-election in 1932.

He was a member of the committee of offenses of the Allegheny County Bar Association, a former chairman of the committee of professional ethics and former member of the executive committee of the association.

Mr. Stadtlander leaves his wife, Mrs. Sophia Breitlauch Stadtlander; a daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stadtlander; a brother, Fred Stadtlander, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, of Bellevue, and Mrs. Paul Menke, of Sheridan.

Babies, Mother Reunited in Court

MARY, 4 MRS. MARY WELSH EDITH, 2½

Mrs. Welsh, Derry school teacher, with her two little daughters after Judge Gardner awarded her Mary's custody in her court action to recover the child from Mary's two aunts, the Misses Nell and Edith Welsh, Glenwood school teachers who contested the case at court.

Mother Gets Her Baby Over Aunts' Protest

Judge Samuel H. Gardner yesterday awarded bright little Mary G. Welsh to her school-teacher mother, Mary I. Welsh, of Derry, resulting in two aunts, Edith and Nell Welsh, bursting into copious tears. It was with considerable difficulty that Miss Nell Welsh composed herself.

In making his decision, as a result of the mother having brought habeas corpus proceedings to gain possession of the youngster, who is 4 years and 8 months old, Judge Gardner said:

"My chief consideration is for the welfare of this child, of which the mother is the natural custodian. In this case there is no question whatever about the character of the mother and that she is the proper person to have possession of little Mary. She will have an excellent home with her maternal grandmother."

Little Mary, who had been with her aunts, sister-in-laws of Mrs. Welsh and also her paternal grandmother, the mother of George Welsh, deceased, since last November 11, was not satisfied to leave her aunts and clung to the coat of Miss Nell Welsh, when the mother cuddled the child in her arms. Mary also cried, having become attached to them since last November.

Miss Nell Welsh nearly swooned as the child was taken away from her arms. She cried:

"I cannot live without her."

Mrs. Welsh, the mother of Mary, had testified earlier in the day that she had permitted her sister-in-law, Edith Welsh, against whom the habeas corpus action was entered, to take Mary to her home until after the holidays. Then the aunts and the paternal grandmother refused to give up the child to the mother. It was testified they would not answer the telephone or the door when demand was made for the youngster.

Brown Denies Ex-Chief Interferred in Contract Awards

BROWN QUESTIONED

Brown was questioned by Chairman Black regarding award of a contract to Transcontinental and Western Air in January, 1931, for carrying the mail between Newark, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, despite that Pittsburgh Airways had been flying a daily schedule in excess of the required 250 miles over the same route. Brown said:

"I looked into the operations of the Pittsburgh Airway and found their schedules were very irregular."

Black asked:

"Who said they were not flying a regular daily schedule?"

Brown replied:

"I think somebody with TWA."

WAS IN HALIFAX

Regarding the middle route, Black asked Brown if three hours after theb ids were opened William T. MacCracken, then assistant Secretary of Commerce and Aeronautics, and three others went to the Postoffice Department and submitted objections to the Avigation company's bid. Brown said:

"I was in Halifax that day."

Black asked, in questioning about the middle route:

"Was the bid of the Avigation company sent to the Attorney General's office on orders of the Whiet House 24 hours after it was submitted?"

Brown said:

"I don't know."

Black asked if William P. MacCracken and three others didn't submit objections to the Postoffice Department against the Avigation bid.

Brown said he di not know.

HOOVER, JR., QUIT

Black said, however, that the Comptroller General had adopted in the main Brown's objections to the bid. Black asked:

'Did you talk with the White House about this bid?"

"Yes, when I came back, I talked with the President about it. The President wanted me to look into it very carefully and make the decision myself."

"Did you discuss it with Herbert Hoover, Jr?"

"No, when I got back I found his letter stating he had resigned as radio engineer for Western Air Express."

Committee to Draft New Air Mail Law

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—With an appeal from Chairman Mead (Dem.), of New York, to "forget all about politics and investigations," the House Postoffice Committee today set out to draft a new basic air mail law designed to eliminate subsidies.

Advised that the Postoffice Department was not yet ready to recommend specific legislation, Mead said the committee would proceed to study the problems and "get right down to the job of drafting legislation."

today, and many times what they were worth before the peak of inflation.

But unfortunately most people did not sell their possessions at that time; and if they had done so, would not have committed any crime by so doing.

Everybody realizes that the prices at that time reflected merely paper profits.

The sad fact is that no one actually received those profits.

THE SITUATION reminds one of the small boy during the Florida land boom who wanted to sell his dog for a thousand dollars.

"You will never get that," said a visitor from a saner section.

"Oh yes I will," said the youngster and pretty soon he came back all smiles and remarked proudly, "I got a thousand dollars and fifty cents for him."

"You did," said the visitor; "how come?"

And the boy said: "Well, I got fifty cents in cash and a thousand-dollar cat."

Nobody but a Democratic congressman is ingenuous enough or rather disingenuous enough to imagine that values can be estimated by the prices temporarily reached at the height of an inflation boom before the boom burst. These allegations about immense profits illicitly obtained are nonsense and not very nice nonsense.

I KNOW something about Mr. Lindbergh's scrupulous regard for ethics and amazing disregard for money.

After he had made his heroic flight across the ocean alone in his little whippet of an airplane, I was filled with admiration for his courage and daring, and with gratitude for the honors he had won for our nation.

I wanted to do something substantial for him.

I felt that many who had won fame for glorious deeds have not won fortune.

I wanted to see if I could not do something for this young man to make him independent for life.

My moving picture company was associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at the time and together these companies made a proposition to Mr. Lindbergh that he make on the screen the story of his interesting and inspiring young life.

The compensation was to be $500,000 cash and a percentage of the profits of this picture.

WHEN Mr. Lindbergh came to my house in New York, I brought out the contract, all signed and sealed and ready to deliver, except for his signature, and presented it to him.

He smiled pleasantly as he read it, and then said:

"That is very fine and I appreciate it, but I cannot do it."

I naturally asked why, and he said:

"You know, I said I did not intend to go into moving pictures."

I tried to argue with him. I said:

"This is not a moving picture in the ordinary sense of the word. It is not a fiction story. It is the real story of your life, a thing that the President of the United States ought to be glad to have done for him.

"It is an historical record of a fine life and a great achievement, to be preserved in pictures for others to see in years to come.

"Do not consider it as a benefit to yourself, but as an inspiration to others."

Young Mr. Lindbergh shook his head and said:

"I wish I could do it if it would please you, but I cannot, because I SAID I WOULD NOT GO INTO PICTURES."

I said:

"All right, but you tear up the contract; I have not the heart to do it."

And he stood there in front of the fireplace in my room and tore up half a million dollars and threw it into the fire.

NOW you cannot tell me that that young man is money-hungry or that he would do anything improper or unethical through a desire for money, or that he is animated by a craving for publicity in his public actions, as the spokesman of the Administration so generously implied.

Here was an opportunity for publicity of the highest and most dignified type, and for a lump payment of half a million dollars plus a percentage of the profits of the pictorial life.

He turned it down, rather foolishly I thought, but magnificently.

When Mr. Lindbergh speaks in behalf of the commercial airplane business of the United States, I know that he does it honestly and sincerely, and because of his sense of justice, and because he believes he is doing his duty to the public.

Morever, he makes his statement in a dignified and proper manner, and does not intimate that the Administration is playing politics; so the Administration has no right to imply that Mr. Lindbergh is seeking publicity.

The spokesman of the Administration can at least be as dignified and as courteous as Mr. Lindbergh has been—and as honest.

THE TROUBLE with some of the politicians who are accusing other people of speculating is that they themselves speculated and got burnt, and are trying to vent their spite on somebody or something in reprisal.

That is the reason for most of the punitive legislation and taxation with which the country is afflicted today.

Personally, I think the nation would be better off if it had more Lindberghs and fewer politicians.

BRAVE PERILS OF LAP OVER MOUNTAIN

Commercial Line Here Curtails Service East and West

The Army brought the mail through today.

The service fliers even licked that bad, old bogey of the airways—"Hell's Stretch," the dangerous stretch across the Allegheny mountains.

Meantime, Pittsburgh's east-west commercial plane service was curtailed. The TWA announced it will furlough all its personnel, effective next Tuesday.

Cracking schedules despite radio failure, stormy weather and unfamiliar routes, four Army pilots zipped in or out of the City-County Airport in the dead of night, and the mail went through, north, south, east and west.

Lieut. Bruce E. Pettigrew, of Chicago, brought the first mail to Pittsburgh under the Army operation of mail ships, bringing his plane down on the snow-swept field at 12:44 a. m. from Indianapolis. He never saw Allegheny County before, so:

"I didn't know whether it was the right airport or not—I guess I was right. The weather got mucky when I neared Pittsburgh. My radio failed to work, but that didn't bother me, and I followed the light beacons."

Similarly nonchalant, Lieut George V. Holloman sped back to Indianapolis in record time; Lieut. James E. Parker roared off to Cleveland in 55 minues, also under schedule, and Lieut. Thayer Olds camei n from Cleveland, knocking 15 minutes off the Army timetable.

Army Airman Conquers Perilous Penna. Mountains

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 20.—(INS.)—Out of a driving snowstorm, Lieut. Donald Wackwitz, of the 9th Observation Group, Mitchel Field, shortly before noon today brought a big Army bomber gracefully down on Newark airport with a load of air mail from Chicago and western points.

Army officers here anxiously awaited word of him, their fears heightened by the bad weather prevailing over the dangerous Allegheny Mountain stretch of the air mail run.

Wackwitz was due at Newark at 10:45 a. m. and as the time passed the anxiety of watchers increased.

Then, just after 11:30 o'clock, the roar of the big bomber's motors was heard through the storm and a few minutes later the Army pilot set his ship down.

Lieut. Wackwitz, first "Army mailman" to land at the local port with a mail cargo, was heartily applauded by fellow officers who have been earthbound by snow, haze and generally bad flying weather.

A short time later, Lieut. G. R. Acheson, Mitchel Field Army flier, inaugurated the army-air mail service westward when he hopped off from Newark airport at 12:30 p. m.

LA ROUX'S DIARY TELLS OF HAPPY DAYS BEFORE BABY DIED

MOTHER LOVE, TEARS BARED IN BOOK

'My Heart Is Broken' She Penned at Child's Death

La Roux Soles came back from her grave today and dipped her pen in a well of tears to write the story of her baby that died.

Into the sordid records of a murder trial in Criminal Court this baby book, the diary of her first born, kept by the mother from the date of birth, was inserted—a blue and pink, cloth-covered volume as fragile as the baby boy it told about.

Here is the story written by LaRoux Soles:

"Announcing the birth of Kenneth Lynch Soles Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Soles, September 1, 1924. Dr. D. P. Blose; nurse, Anna V. Free.

"Our blessed baby came at 7 p. m. o'clock, McKeesport Hospital, Monday, Labor Day. Seven pounds eight ounces at birth.

"GIFTS—Aunt Alice W. Soles, first gift, a lovely litle dress and bib. White kid shoes and lovely silk stockings from Rachel . . . Pink and white blanket, pillow, baby bunting wrap, rattle, carriage robe from Aunt Cynthia.

"September, 1924, we gave our darling a name, Kenneth Lynch Soles.

"OUR BABY WAS OUT THE FIRST TIME TODAY—September 23, 1924. Ken had his first airing in his carriage on the 6th of March. He was quite delighted and afterward a fine, long nap.

WRINGS HER HEART

"On the 26th of February we discovered two lower teeth.

"He looks so cunning in his little short dresses and socks, but it wrings my heart to see him getting away from his nice baby things.

"THE FIRST SMILE—It would be hard to tell when he first smiled, but I know he is the sunniest little fellow, and has to be pretty sad not to smile at the slightest excuse.

"OUR DEAR CREPT THE FIRST TIME TODAY—At the age of 10 months he flies along the floor with one leg doubled under him as if so afraid I will catch him and spoil the fun.

GREAT HOPES

"THE FIRST CHRISTMAS CAME—Dec. 25, 1924. Ken's first Christmas was enjoyed at 507 Locust street. He didn't participate to any great extent, but we have great hopes for next year.

"BABY'S FIRST WORD WAS—'KITTY'—At 15 months Ken says 'Kitty,' 'boo-woo,' 'dad' and 'mamma.'

"THE FIRST STEPS—Ken is trying to step out at the age of one year. He runs all around his play pen and bed but is timid when he tries to walk in the room.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

"OUR DEAR ONE IS ONE YEAR OLD—September 1, 1925. We had a lovely time celebrating Ken's first birthday. Had a big birthday cake with one candle and later on Ken enjoyed a drumstick.

"A HAPPY EASTER FOR BABY DEAR—April 12, 1925. A lovely white bunny from his daddy and a beautiful yellow one with a fascinating squeal from Aunt Helen. Ken's first photographs were finished and they were adorable with his two little teeth shining.

"OUR DEAR WALKED"—On February 13, 1926. From the willow chair in the kitchen to the middle of the living room floor, before he sat down hard. Saturday evening. No one to witness this feat but his admiring mother.

"HIS LITTLE SAYINGS—Wants to kiss anybody . . . 'Da-kiss' . . . 'By-by-zoo-zoo' . . . 'In-in-in' . . . 'Bottie' . . . So sweet in his 'ov-alls' and 'rompies' . . . 'L'il honey' . . . 'Sa'a . . . 'At' for hat . . . 'Dupps,' meaning his sweater . . . I 'ant' for want.

"Ken's second Thanksgiving, Nov. 26, 1925, passed very pleasantly. He was very strange and insisted on being with his dad.

GIFT FROM DADDY

"Ken's second Christmas was quite a success with a beautiful Christmas tree and lots of toys. He seemed to like the big drum his Grandad Lynch gave him the best. December 25, 1926. Forgot to mention the Taylor Tot which enables him to fly around and get into everything. His daddy's gift.

And then—the last entry in the diary:

"Our darling left us Wednesday evening at 8:15, August 25, 1926. One week before his birthday.

"My heart is broken."

Lost on Sea Cruise, Warren William Safe

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Warren William is all set for a sea picture. He went to sea, tussled with a disabled engine, was sought by the Coast Guard and finally showed up in port, hale and hearty.

The film actor became the object of a search yesterday when he failed to return from a cruise begun last Friday. A short time later his yacht put in at Los Angeles Harbor. The actor and his companion had been forced to rely on sail.

SOLES DRAWS PACKED HOUSE

The appearance of Soles on the witness stand in the closing minutes of yesterday's trial session was the signal for a record crowd that occupied every available foot of space within the coutroom today and overflowed. All hoped for a glimpse of "Handsome Bob."

So great was the crowd at the morning's session that the rear entrance to the courtroom, closed until today, was opened to permit witnesses and newspapermen to leave with ease.

Nearly 100 persons crowded the small entrance corner of the room.

Miss Turville, Presbyterian Hospital clerk who went to the stand, produced records of Mrs. Soles' operation in 1929.

Soles Gives Own Story of Shooting in Court Testimony

(The question and answer story of the Soles' murder trial follows.)

Bob Soles, perked up a bit in appearance from yesterday, resumed the witness stand in Criminal Court today as the trial resumed. He was questioned by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton.

Q.—Mr. Soles, when did you and your wife move into your home in Jenny Lind street?

A.—In the summer of 1926.

Q.—How long did you and your wife live there before your father-in-law, Mr. Lynch, come to live there with you?

A.—He came up in November, 1931.

Q.—Then did the three of you live there until June, 1933, when this trouble occurred?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did anybody else compose that household except your wife, yourself and Mr. Lynch—and, of course, your maid?

A.—No.

DEATH OF CHILD

Q.—Mr. Soles, when was it that your second child died?

A.—In May, 1927.

Q.—Do you remember in 1929 when your wife went to the Pittsburgh Diagnostic Clinic for an examination?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have any talk with her before she went there?

A.—Yes, she told me that Dr. Harvey told her she ought to take a complete examination.

Q.—Had you ever been with her in Dr. Harvey's office?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How many times?

A.—Oh, several times . . . I guess three or four times.

Q.—Do you remember when your wife got the report from the clinic?

A.—Yes, it was in the summer of 1929.

Q.—After that your wife went to the Presbyterian Hospital?

—A.—Yes.

WIFE IN HOSPITAL

Q.—Were you present with her at the hospital?

A.—Well, yes—I was with her when they brought her down from the operating room.

Q.—Was there any time after your wife was in the hospital that she went to Florida?

A.—Yes, she went with Mr. Lynch in the winter of 1931 and came back in May, 1932.

Q.—Do you remember when your wife bought a small automobile?

A.—Yes, it was in the fall of 1932.

Q.—Did she make a trip to the Cockrill home in Indiana in it?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then did she go to Florida again that year?

A.—Yes, I put her on a train in Washington, D. C., and she went down to join her father in Florida. That was in December, 1932.

Q.—Mr. Soles, do you remember Christmas, 1931. Do you remember that Christmas?

A.—Yes.

CHRISTMAS GIFT

Q.—Did you give your wife a gift that year? What did you give her?

A.—Yes, I gave her $100 that year.

Q.—Do you remember what you gave her in 1932 . . . that is if you gave her anything?

A.—She didn't want anything that year. She said the trip was gift enough.

Q.—Did you send her Christmas greetings by wire that year?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you get a telegram back?

A.—I don't remember whether I did or not.

Eaton then produced a telegram which the defendant identified as the one he had sent his wife, extending Christmas greetings.

Then Eaton produced a letter written by Soles' wife to him. The letter was dated January 9, 1933, and was written in Florida. Calling his attention to the last two paragraphs, Eaton instructed Soles to read this portion to the jury. Then Eaton produced another letter and after Soles had identified it as one written to him by his wife from Florida on January 12, 1933, Eaton himself read it.

SENT TELEGRAM

At this juncture, Eaton handed Soles a telegram and asked:

"In the meantime when you didn't hear from your wife, did you send her a telegram?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And is this that telegram (handing it to him)?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Read it.

Soles read:

"Three weeks are too long to not hear from you. Are you ill?"

Q.—And did you receive a telegram in reply?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Is this that reply? (Hands him another telegram.)

A.—Yes.

Q.—Read it.

Soles read again:

"Sorry you were alarmed. Feeling fine."

LETTERS FROM LA ROUX

Eaton interspersed his examination of Soles by reading the letters LaRoux had sent her husband from Miami—letters which indicated they were still fond of each other.

Q.—Your wife speaks (in one letter) of you being ill?

A.—I had a very bad case of laryngitis . . . the day before Christmas.

Q.—In that letter I just read you received a check from your wife?

A.—I did.

Q.—I show you this check for $600. Is that the check sent you by your wife?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you comply with her request to wire her $600?

A.—I did.

Q.—It was her personal check and you cashed it and sent the money?

A.—I did.

Q.—And I suppose you had to pay the (telegraph) charges in addition?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You sent her this Valentine telegram, too?

A.—Yes, sir.

Judge Patterson then instructed Eaton to read only portions of the letter—enough to show the affection between the two.

Q.—Did you employ people to get your home in order for your wife's return?

A.—I did.

Q.—Your wife wired she'd phone you at 9:30. Did she?

A.—She did.

Q.—What was the substance of the conversation?

A.—That they'd leave Miami by March 1.

RETURN HOME

Q.—Now, Mr. Soles, when did your wife get home?

A.—I don't know the exact date — about the middle of April.

Q.—Were you home when she arrived?

A.—I was.

Q.—What, in your opinion, was her condition?

A.—Very poor.

Q.—How long was it before something unusual happened in connection with a letter?

A.—Oh, I should say about April 27 or 28.

Eaton then asked Soles to identify this letter—the one reputedly written by William Sibley Martin, who signed himself "Mrs." and asked a loan of $40 to pay an anticipated hospital bill.

Q.—Where was this letter when you first saw it?

A.—Lying on a table in the living room one morning about 9:30.

Q.—Where were you before you saw the letter?

A.—In bed.

Q.—And what did you do?

A.—I heard Mrs. Soles crying, so I jumped out of bed and ran into the living room . . . She was lying on the floor with her head against the davenport.

Q.—How close was she to her father (H. B. Lynch)?

A.—He could have reached down and touched her.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—After speaking a few words I——

Q.—Well, what did you say?

A.—I said, "Here, here, what's the matter?" and they didn't say anything.

Q.—What did Mr. Lynch do?

A.—He turned and sat down.

Q.—Then what else did you say?

A.—I said, 'What's wrong, Spike?' and she said, 'It's that man, that letter.' I said, 'Well, it's no place for you on the floor.' I picked her up and carried her to the bedroom.

Q.—When did you first read the contents of the letter?

A.—After we were both in bed. She called my attention to a man named Martin.

Q.—What did she say?

A.—She said in a weak moment she had let herself go to Mr. Martin and both got sick.

Q.—What did she tell you about the letter?

A.—I said that's a woman's name and she said that's the way he always signed his name. I asked her if she had ever gotten any other letters from him and she said she had.

TELEPHONE CALL

Q.—Within a few days after the letter, did a telephone call come to your home?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What do you know about that?

A.—I was in the bedroom getting dressed and walked out into the hall. My wife was talking on the telephone. When I walked up to her she looked up in an alarmed sort of way. She put her hand over the transmitter and said "It's him."

I said, "Who?"

She said, "Martin."

"I said, "Let me talk to him." And then I took the phone and said:

"Who is it?"

The voice on the telephone said, "I want to talk to Mrs. Robert Soles." And I said "You're not talking to her . . .

"Any skunk that bothers a woman like you're doing ought to be arrested. What have you got to say to Mrs. Soles!"

And the voice said, "Anything I have to say, I want to say it to her. I'll be up around Pittsburgh soon and maybe I'll drop in."

I told him "You don't have to come up here, I'll be down there, or at least half way."

But to get back to the beginning of the conversation, I asked who it was and the voice said, "John Lynch," and I said, "No, it wasn't" because I knew John Lynch's voice.

Q.—Now, Mr. Soles, I show you a telegram dated April 28, 1933, and ask you if you sent that telegram to John Lynch in Florida?

A.—I Did.

WIRE TO LYNCH

Soles then identified two more telegrams as having been sent and received by him. He read them.

The first was to John Lynch from Soles:

"I want Martin's address at once, Bob."

Then, in reply, he said he received the following:

"Watt Martin, Mayfield court, John."

Finally, on April 29, he testified, he sent the following back to Lynch:

"I did not ask address of Watt Martin, but I specifically asked for the address of William S. Martin stop. I want that address stop. Furthermore I want know why he could call me on telephone this morning and use your name stop. Please be definite and specific."

The message was signed Robert S. Soles.

Q.—What was your wife's mental condition after that phone call from Martin?

A.—Mental condition?

Haggerty objected and the court sustained Haggerty.

Q.—What did she do and how did she express herself?

A.—We didn't do much talking about it. I tried to keep it quiet. It wasn't my idea to talk about something that was a thorn in the side.

Q.—What was her conduct?

A.—She acted as if I might be peeved at her. She stayed in her room fixing clothes or in the living room reading. She stayed by herself.

Q.—Did you offer to take her away?

ATLANTIC CITY TRIP

A.—O, yes. Since she didn't want to go to Europe, she allowed me to take her to Atlantic City.

Q.—What did she say?

A.—She said she would be glad to go anywhere with me.

Q.—Did you talk of going anywhere else?

A.—Yes, we talked of going to Canada for three weeks.

Q.—When did you leave for Atlantic City?

A.—I think in April.

Q.—On the way over how long did you stay in New York?

A.—Four days.

Q.—Why?

A.—Well, I was badly troubled by the turn of events.

Q.—What was her mental state?

A.—Well, she was worked up.

Q.—Where did you stay in Atlantic City?

A.—At the Sea Side Hotel about May 15 to June 15.

Q.—Were you together much?

A.—I never let her out of my sight.

Q.—Why?

A.—I was afraid she'd do away with her self. She thought there was no hope for her. She said she had tried to commit suicide in Florida by taking poison pills. She said she tried again.

Q.—What did you say?

A.—I said let's forget everything and start over; we all make mistakes."

Q.—Before you reached Atlantic City, did anything else happen at York?

A.—Yes. We had been in the room and we sat around until about 12 o'clock; then we went to bed. I slept about an hour. Then I saw she was leaning out the window, peering over the ledge. I thought she was getting ready to jump out the

La ROUX SOLES' RECORD OF HER BABY KENNETH . . . . HANDSOME BOB READ IT IN COURT

A page from the baby book from which Robert S. Soles, defending a charge of murdering his wife, read to the jury in which his fate is to rest. When Kenneth died eight years ago at the age of 2, his father said, his mother, La Roux, wrote in a book: "My heart is broken."

LA ROUX SOLES' LOVE LETTERS TO BOB READ

Terms of Affection Mark Messages Of Couple

Letters which La Roux Soles wrote to Bob Soles while she was in Miami for the winter season of 1933 were introduced into the court record today.

The letters:

Sunday P. M.
(No date; mailed Miami, Fla., Jan. 9, 1933.

To Robert S. Soles,
507 Locust street,
McKeesport, Pa.

My Dear Old Kid:

Have started to write several times but something always happened to interrupt the proceedings. The family are on their way to bed so now is my chance.

Surely enjoyed your letter as always, so make it soon again. Wrote to Lall and had an answer the other day. After a terrible struggle I think I was able to read most of it. Was I right when I said Miss Brown had been looking after her? Isn't she with your mother? Also had a letter from Edith today. I had written to her but evidently she hadn't received it. The mail down here makes me sick. You never know whether your letter is going to be received or not. Edith seems to be having her usual hard luck.

The weather has been marvelous, and such gorgeous moonlight nights. Where we are there is such a breeze from the ocean, when I get to sleep I just pass out. I have felt very good until yesterday. Something I ate must have upset me; my face was a sight, humps all over like hives. It may be too much fruit. O. K. today.

SEES HELEN RICHEY

Helen Richey has been staying at the Biltmore in Coral Gables. I have seen her once, but it is almost impossible to make arrangements to meet. We have no telephone, so she can't call me. I am so disappointed; I wanted her to come over here and stay a few days, but she is leaving on a tour tomorrow. She said if she could get anyone to drive over she would be here tonight, but it looks doubtful. We drove out to see her this afternoon, but she was at the airport.

We had a lot of fun Friday night. It was John's birthday, so he got a friend of his and we went to the Frolics, a night club. They have quite a floor show, also living pictures in the nude. It was the berries. After we left there we went to the hotel and got Helen out of bed, didn't get to talk much with her, made a date for 1 o'clock Saturday, but my hives kept me in. Good looking crowd at the club, lots of men in uniform from the airport, and lots of pretty girls, good music, etc. I sure did enjoy stepping out, for I do get lonesome in the evenings.

Suppose you have talked with Mrs. Erhard. She sure did hate to go home. We miss her, for she is a good sport and lots of fun.

Saw the wildest picture the other night called "Farewell to Arms." They had everything * * * * on the screen. I am just wondering how on earth they will ever show that picture in McK. Also saw "The Mummy." It was very spooky.

Lots of people coming in now, but the real crowd won't be here until around the 15th. The class of people around here seems to be improving a little.

HAD GOOD LAUGH

Had a good laugh over your description of the radio you had bought. Had you forgotten that you had bought it before we left and we enjoyed it very much. If I remember rightly it was delivered a short time before we left for Tris' and Frank's party. That's one on you.

Dad wanted me to thank you for the letter about the license. He also received Frank's letter with check inclosed. Said he would write one of these days. He is so busy doing nothing, it is painful. This is sure a lazy life.

Glad you left the battery in the car; no use to spend any unnecessary money. I am in funds so far, and I'll let you know if I am short. I buy food for the house and things like that, and take him to a movie when I can get away with it. Dad looks better than he did when I first came down, but I think he is tired of it down here. He says it is a mistake to spend the summer here unless it is necessary, too much sameness.

My box of clothes arrived in good condition. We all received the cards, telegrams, etc., and they were very much appreciated.

Sorry to hear Coos is so miserable. I sent him a crazy card, which I sure hope he received. Told him he had better get on a plane and come down for the week-end, they are running from Pittsburgh to Miami now in a day. Wouldn't that be a thrill?

We get the daily news so I can keep up on local affairs, I sure would hate to miss anything. I have to watch the weather reports when I can look out at the nice warm sunshine, only I do wish you could be out of it, too, it's a dam shame.

HOMESICK ON NEW YEARS

Didn't you have any entertainment New Years Eve? I was thinking of you all evening and picturing you all some place having a big time. Of course it was very quiet here, made me somewhat homesick.

I'll bet you were disappointed when you missed Aunt Tris and window. I watched her for an hour. She would get up and down and smoked a lot of cigarets. I finally got up with her and we sat around until about 5 o'clock and then went to sleep.

Q.—In Atlantic City, how did you get this idea out of her head?

A.—Well she walked around in a trance and I said "We won't talk about anything that's gone on." I tried to make everything as comfortable as possible. I wouldn't let her out of my sight.

Q.—Who drove you home?

A.—I drove all the way that day to York. And we stopped at the same hotel.

Q.—Were either of you affected by what you had eaten?

A.—Yes, we were both affected by the sea food. Neither of us slept very much.

Q.—What time did you get started for home?

A.—About noon.

Q.—What time did you arrive in McKeesport?

A.—I think about 10 o'clock. She got sick coming down the mountains. She had been living a bit, and I made her stop.

Q.—What time did you get up Sunday morning?

A.—Around 12 o'clock.

Q.—What room did you occupy?

A.—The downstairs bedroom. I slept in bed next the street side and she in the bed next the door.

Q.—What time did you have dinner?

A.—About 1:30.

Q.—Was there anybody else there?

A.—Mr. Lynch, Mrs. Soles and myself.

Q.—What did you do that afternoon?

A.—I wanted to go out and get some air, but she didn't want to go out. So I started out in the car and came back about six.

Q.—Who was there when you came back?

A.—Edith Stewart.

Q.—How long did Edith Stewart stay?

A.—She and I and Mrs. Soles sat around and talked until about 9 o'clock.

Q.—What did you talk about?

A.—O, I don't know. We talked about old times. I brought out a book of pictures of old friends. I showed her the things I had bought Mrs. Soles and she showed the things she had bought me.

Q.—Did you discuss any other matters?

A.—Mrs. Soles complained that she was sick.

Q.—Was there any discussion about a permit you had for a gun?

A.—Yes. I said something about some valuables I had in a little room next to the bedroom and Mrs. Stewart said, "Aren't you afraid to keep them there?" I said, "We're well protected here, aren't we, Spike?" And I showed her the gun.

Q.—What guns did you have there?

A.—One was a .45 Smith and Wesson.

Q.—Did you get that out?

A.—I got them both out.

Q.—What was the other one?

A.—The other was a .38 caliber Colt.

Soles then identified the guns introduced by Eaton.

Q.—Were both the guns brought out when Edith Stewart was there?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where was your wife in reference to the guns?

A.—She was in the same room, I think, sitting in the large chair.

Q.—Did your wife have a hold of either of the guns?

A.—She took one in her hand. I don't know which one.

Q.—After Mrs. Stewart left, did anyone else come that night?

A.—Yes. I heard Dr. Richey's voice on the porch. I don't know whether I spoke to him or not. Some time after 10 o'clock, my nephew, Jack Soles, and Sam Murdoch came.

Q.—How long did they stay?

A.—A good half hour.

Q.—Where did you go then?

A.—I went down town.

Q.—Where downtown?

A.—I intended to go to the office and gather together a few papers I had talked to my wife about. We were going to Chicago in two days and I wanted to take the papers home where I wouldn't be bothered.

Q.—Had you planned to go to Chicago.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you get the papers?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then where did you go?

A.—I called Mrs. Hardy on the telephone and asked her whether she was at home. She said yes. And I said 'If you have a few minutes, I might tell you about the trip.'

Q.—Did you go there?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What time did you stay there?

A.—It must have been 11:25 to about 1:30 when I left.

Q.—Under what circumstances did you come to know Mrs. Hardy?

Haggerty objected and after a side-bar conference, Eaton asked:

Q.—Mr. Soles, without giving the details, do you know of anything between Mr. Lynch and Mrs. Hardy?

Haggerty objected again and Judge Patterson instructed Eaton to reform his question.

Q.—How did you meet Mrs. Hardy?

A.—She called my home. I went down to see her.

Q.—Following that, did you from time to time visit her apartment?

A.—I did.

Judge Patterson interrupted:

"Ask the witness whether or not his wife knew he had gone to Mrs. Hardy's."

The witness was asked:

Q.—Did you report to your wife that you had seen Mrs. Hardy?

A.—I did.

'I DID NOT SHOOT'

There was a long, dramatic pause and then Eaton continued:

Q.—Bob, when you came home that night, did you shoot your wife?

A.—I did not shoot my wife.

Q.—When you returned from Rose Hardy's apartment, where did you find your wife?

A.—She was lying upon the bed.

Q.—What lights were in the room?

A.—There was one dim light burning on the dresser.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—I heard her moan, but I kept on going. I did not stop.

Q.—Why didn't you stop?

A.—She had moaned in her sleep, particularly on our trip. Sometimes when I spoke to her she would stop. Other times she would wake up and say "Oh, I must have been dreaming." I heard her moan again and I called to her, "What's the matter, Spike, do you still have indigestion? Shall I get you some soda?" She answered, "No."

Q.—What did you do then?

A.—I walked to the chiffonier and threw the papers on the other bed and then I thought I shouldn't make so much noise. I got my pajamas out of one of the bags we had packed and after putting them on, walked into the second living room. I picked up the comic section and the first part of the Sunday paper from a chair.

Q.—Did you know anything was wrong at this time?

A.—No, I didn't know there was anything wrong.

Q.—Where did you go then?

A.—I went into the kitchen and made a sandwich and fooled around there for a while and then went to the bathroom to read the paper.

Q.—At this time, how long had it been since you returned home?

A.—I had been home about an hour.

Q.—When you left the bathroom what did you do?

LA ROUX MOANS

A.—Well, I adjusted the lights in the hall, then turned the light out in the bathroom and went into the bedroom and started to close the door. La Roux moaned much louder. I looked down and I tossed a paper over to her and said, "Hey there, wake up," but she moaned again. Then I said, "What's the matter with you, Spike?" and she told me, "I shot myself." I turned on the lights and saw blood on her.

Q.—Where on the bed was she lying?

A.—She was slightly off center.

Q.—Was there any more conversation?

A.—No, I guess I was flabbergasted. I ran down the hall and yelled, "H. B., H. B., Spike has shot herself." He ran out of his room towards me and I grabbed him by his pajama sleeve. He tore away and ran into the room. Then he sat on the bed and looked at her and afterwards looked up at me and said, "Damn you, you're the cause of this." La Roux said, "No, no, dad. Bob didn't do this. I did it."

ACCUSED BY LYNCH

Q.—What did he say to you?

A.—He said, "Damn you, you're the cause of this. You did it."

Q.—Did La Roux say anything?

A.—Yes, she said, "No, no—Bob didn't have anything to do with it."

Q.—What was done then . . . what did you do?

A.—Well, I was just standing there; I was confused all right. Her father said, Damn it, go get some water." I got it and gave it to him. He tried to pour it in her mouth. She was lying down. He yelled at me, "Go get a spoon," and I went and got it. I don't remember whether there was one in the room or where I got it. I just remember I got it and he started feeding her water with the spoon.

I was still standing in a sort of daze and he yelled, "Go get a doctor," but it was pretty late at night and I didn't know who to get. Then he went out into the hall to call Dr. Jordan and I stayed with La Roux. I asked her, "What time did this happen?" and she said "I shot myself about 10 minutes to 12."

Then Lynch interrupted out in the hall and La Roux said, "Dad can't find the number without his glasses," so I went out and said I'd call the doctor. Mr. Lynch ran down the hall past me and out the door. I think he was only wearing pajamas. I called Dr. Jordan and got him on the phone.

Q.—What did you say to Dr. Jordan?

CALLS DOCTOR

A.—I said, "Doctor, we've had some trouble up here. La Roux shot herself. Can you come up?" He said, "That's terrible, but I've been sick myself. Can't you get Dr. Heisey?" Then I told him Mr. Lynch was on his way down to the house and he said, "Here he is now," and he said "I'll come up."

Q.—At that time did you see anything of the note or gun?

A.—No.

Q.—What did you do then?

A.—I went back into the bedroom and said to La Roux, "I'm in a terrible shape. Your father has just accused me of shooting you and other people will think I did it, too." She said, "No they won't—I left a note for you. It's on the dressing table." I went over and looked and there it was.

Q.—Was that the same note that has been introduced here in court?

A.—I don't know. I haven't seen the note here.

Then Eaton showed him the note and he identified it.

Q.—Where was the gun discovered and how did that happen?

A.—I came back across the room and asked La Roux: "What did you do with the gun? Where is it?" She said, "Down there," and she pointed down to the floor. I got down on my hands and knees and looked around. I found it. I forget whether it was at the side of the bed or at the foot of the bed. I picked it up like this. (Soles picked up the gun and snapped open the cylinder. I shoved this pin and six shells came out—five loaded ones and one empty. I said: "My goodness, La Roux, what did you put six bullets in for?" She said: "I wanted to make sure. If one bullet wouldn't do it I was going to pull the trigger again."

Q.—What did you do then?

BRINGS WATER

A.—I put the bullets on the dresser and then La Roux asked me for some more water and I threw the gun on the bed and went after it.

Q.—How long was it before Mr. Lynch came back from the doctor?

A.—I don't know . . . everybody was so mixed up and everything.

Q.—How long before Dr. Jordan came in?

A.—Well, pretty soon, but I don't know just who came in first or when.

Soles then related how he had turned over the empty shell and the note to Dr. Jordan, and Eaton resumed:

Q.—Was a search made for the gun?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you join in?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Why didn't you find it?

A.—Well, it was hidden in the bed clothing. I forgot momentarily where I had put it (the gun) and I just joined in with the others to look for it. I finally found it by shaking the bedclothes out. It was under the blanket, wrapped up like.

Q.—Did you go down to the hospital with your wife?

A.—No. I drove down in my own car.

TALK AT HOSPITAL

His wife was in the emergency room when he arrived.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with her and the officers when they came in?

A.—Yes, I remember Connelly and Eckles coming in and when they asked the name, I said, "Well, just call her Smith."

Q.—Why did you say that?

A.—Well, I thought they knew who she was and who I was and I just told them to say Smith. I was ashamed of myself afterwards.

Q.—What time did you leave the hospital?

A.—About daylight.

Q.—Did anyone go up with you?

A.—Yes, Officer Connelly and Lieut. Eckles.

Q.—Was any search made that resulted in the finding of the bullet hole in the wall?

A.—Yes, we looked around and I think Lieut. Eckles found it.

Q.—Did you offer Miss McLaughlin, the nurse, any money at the hospital?

A.—I don't remember that, at all.

Q.—Did you offer the officers any money?

OFFERED $5 TO POLICE

A.—I sure did. I offered them $5.

Q.—What was the purpose of that?

A.—Well, I wanted them to have it. I thought they were working pretty hard and I wanted them to make some money on the side.

Q.—Did you tell the officers you had this letter? (Eaton indicated the Martin letter).

A.—Yes, I had the letter in my hand and I remember asking Connelly whether he knew a man named Martin. I got all mixed up. I didn't know whether it was Watt, Pepper or William Martin. I remember LaRoux had told me that fellow knew a ball player in McKeesport and I thought Connelly might know the man. There were a lot of things running through my head.

Q.—Did you go back to the hospital that day?

A.—Yes.

He then explained he went back in the morning and again in the afternoon. With him in the afternoon, he testified, was Minnie Buckweitz, his stenographer. He said he had visited the hospital again later that night, about 12:30.

Q.—Did you get any information about a car driving up to your house that night?

OBJECTION UPHELD

Haggerty objected. Eaton promised to explain that this car's presence explains why Soles later sent for Tom Lindberg, McKeesport druggist. Judge Patterson sustained the objection.

Q.—Did you see your wife again before she died?

A.—No, I didn't.

Q.—What prevented you?

A.—Dr. Harvey stopped me (outside the hospital).

Q.—Did you see anything of Mr. Lynch at the hospital?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you use any bad language to Mrs. Cockrill, as she testified?

A.—No, sir. That's a mistake.

Q.—Did you say to her that you had met a 'good-looking blonde?'

A.—I don't remember saying that.

Q.—Why wasn't she buried in Indiana (as originally planned?)

A.—Because her father wouldn't make the arrangements with me.

SENT FOR BULLETS

Soles then told of sending his chauffeur, after the shooting, to Schrader's hardware store for four bullets—not four .45 slugs, as the state contends, but two .45's and two .38's.

Q.—Why did you send for these?

A.—Because I wanted to compare the sizes with the hole in the wall.

Q.—What happened when you went into the hospital?

A.—I met Miss Brown (the nurse) and she said, "Hello, Bob, don't you know me?" and I said, "Hello, Brownie." I went in and looked at my wife and saw those needles.

Q.—Now Miss Brown has testified that you said, "Let her die." Did you ever say that?

A.—I absolutely deny that.

Q.—Did you talk about those needles (which were injected into LaRoux' body as part of the treatment?)

A.—Yes. I remember when Mrs. Soles had her child she had that same treatment and I knew they were very painful. So I said to Brownie, "Can't you take those needles out there?"

Eaton then displayed a long needle which Soles said resembled the hospital needles.

CITES EXONERATION

Q.—What was the conversation between you and your wife?

A.—I said, "Did I ever do anything to cause you to do this?" and she said, "No, no. You're the finest man I ever knew." I said, "I'd like to know before Harry here if I actually shot you." And she said, "No, no, you had nothing to do with it . . . You didn't shoot me."

Q.—When were you next in the hospital?

A.—The next day, in the morning and again in the afternoon. I took Miss Buchweitz and the maid there.

Q.—Why did you take Miss Buchweitz?

A.—I wanted Miss Buchweitz (his secretary) to take shorthand notation about what went on in the house. She seemed to never quite finish her sentences.

COURT CROWD BATTLES

When court reconvened this afternoon the crowd was trying to fight its way into the courtroom and the shouts of the jostled tipstaves echoed over the room. Eaton renewed the questioning.

Q.—Did you talk to Tim Lindberg in your home (following the shooting)?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Now there has been testimony that you pointed a gun at him. Did you have a real gun?

A.—No. It was a toy gun I got i nAtlantic City.

Q.—Did you ask him whether he was walking or driving past your home (on the night of the shooting)?

A.—I asked him whether he knew anybody was in my house.

Q.—You had heard something (along these lines)?

A.—I did.

Q.—Was Rose Hardy in your home to take inventory (after the shooting)?

A.—Yes. She knew Mr. Lynch's effects pretty well.

Q.—Did you go to Atlantic City after this trouble?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you drive your own car?

A.—Yes, but I didn't want to. I wasn't well.

SEARCH FOR MARTIN

Q.—Did you continue to hunt for William S. Martin?

A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—When you were brought to the District Attorney's office shortly before your arrest, who was with you?

A.—The District Attorney and Mr. Connors (county detective).

Q.—What did you say to them?

A.—I told them substantially what I have said here . . . Park called me 'a damn liar' and shook his fist at me and said he didn't believe a word I said and that he wanted a statement.

Q.—How long were you kept there that first day?

A.—About five hours.

Q.—The next day (he spent the night in jail) what time were you brought back up?

SOLES RELATES OWN STORY OF SHOOTING

A.—Around noon . . . till about 6.

Q.—What did you tell them then?

A.—I was getting confused somewhat. They were firing a lot of questions a me. They asked how she was shot and how she was put in bed and how she wrote the note. Connors held a .45-caliber gun and said, "This is the gun you shot your wife with," and I kept telling them, "I swear to God I have not shot my wife." . . . Mr. Connors had a nice story arranged for me about how I went in and found my wife smoking and had a bad argument with her about another woman, and I said I never had an argument with my wife over another woman in my life. . . . Park said, "You'll make a statement we want or we'll send you to jail for murder," and I said, "All right, that's all I can do."

HANDCUFFED TO RAIL

Soles then told of being handcuffed to a rail in the county detective bureau for a half hour. Eaton showed him his own handwriting on the reputed confession.

Q.—Whose handwriting is this?

A.—That's mine, Mark. Park dictated it and told me it was no good without my signature, I put down what they told me.

Q.—Now this statement says those McKeesport policemen were at your house. Is that so?

A.—No. I saw them at the hospital.

Q.—Now there has been testimony that this statement was taken without interruptions. Were there interruptions?

A.—Yes. Mr. Connors would say, "No, no, that's not the way to put it." I shoved it back to Park and said, "It's a pack of lies, there it is."

After identifying a $500 check he said he gave LaRoux for a birthday gift, Soles was turned over to Haggerty for cross-examination.

READS FROM DIARY

Robert Soles was on the witness stand late yesterday afternoon when court adjourned abruptly after preliminary testimony had been taken, outlining Soles' Army and business career. The high point was the defendant's quotation from a baby-book kept by La Roux Soles:

"Our darling left us Wednesday evening at 8:15, August 25, 1926. One week before his birthday. My heart is broken."

Mrs. Soles' will leaving $20,000 to her husband and telegrams exchanged between them when she was in Miami in 1933 were introduced.

Records of an operation Mrs. Soles underwent at Presbyterian Hospital in June, 1929, were read by Mildred Turville, clerk at the hospital. She was followed on the stand by Robert Hamilton, McKeesport policeman, who testified Mrs. Soles said her husband "didn't do it" as she lay in a hos-

Empty Your Gall Bladder

And You'll Feel Like a Billion Dollars!

Sleepless nights, dog-tired days, headaches, pains in all parts of the body—indigestion—gas. Do you suffer from one or all?

And have you tried every medicine under the sun, only to find yourself back where you started?

No wonder, for you, like thousands of others have probably been treating yourself for everything but the right thing. Get at the unsuspected cause—your gall bladder. If sluggish, it won't pour into your small intestines the most important digestive juice necessary for neutralizing gastric acid, quickening digestion and disinfecting the intestinal tract. If this juice doesn't flow freely, then your food sours, putrifies, stomach becomes filled with gas and acidity.

From the world's greatest chemists comes a simple, pleasant means to make this digestive juice flow freely, and put you on the sunny side of life. Magnesia Oxoids, little white tablets that release pure oxygen. This amazing oxygen purer than the air you breathe—plus magnesia, gently stimulates the gall bladder, neutralizes burning acidity and sweeps that poison-packed bowel clean.

Take two Oxoids after each meal and before retiring, drink plenty of water, put your gall bladder to work, and you'll jump out of your skin for joy. Such new health! Such robust vigor! Get Magnesia Oxoids today from your druggist.

15 GOOD STYLES WITH TAPESTRY COVERS

Frankly, we were wrong about these suites. We thought there would be great demand for two pieces at 79.75, during the February Sale. Instead almost everyone preferred the more expensive $99 suite. We're telling you the WHOLE TRUTH because we want you to understand why we're offering them at this unheard of price. Excellent values at 79.75. At 49.75 you can judge for yourself. And, of course, you can buy one on our convenient payment plan.

Seamless Royal Wilton RUGS 29.75

We Couldn't Buy Them Ourselves for This Price Today

A discarded phrase from the ads of long ago was "we're giving them away." We're putting that phrase right back into use, but honestly at Gimbels. A "fluke" of the market (to tell the whole story would violate many confidences) got 100 of them for us at an abnormally low price. Even so we should ask far more than 29.75 for them. We're almost giving them away! We want more business. Persian, Chinese and Colonial designs in a wide range of colors. Every rug weighs over 40 lbs. You can see how heavy they are. Every one is seamless. But there are just 100 in the 9x12 and 8.3x10.6 ft. sizes. They should be gone by ten o'clock.

Your Replacement Price Will Be 49.50—$5 Delivers

pital room the night of the shooting.

Jack Soles, 22, nephew of the defendant, testified that he and Sam Murdock of McKeesport were at the Soles home between 10:15 and 11 p. m. on the fatal night.

Q.—What was Mrs. Soles' demeanor?

A.—Most unusual . . . There seemed a tension.

Q.—Was there anything she did before you left?

A.—Yes. She said, "Well, goodbye, Jack," and she squeezed my arm in a most unusual way.

LaRoux's condition in 1929 was described as "psycho-neurotic" by Dr. W. H. Mayer.

Dr. R. R. Snowden, of the Pittsburgh Diagnostic Clinic, testified that Mrs. Soles was a patient in 1929 and possessed "the typical symptom complex of a psycho-neurotic."

INTERNATIONAL SEEKS U. S. ART

American artists will be invited this month to enter 100 paintings in the 1930 Carnegie International Exhibition of Paintings to be held here from October 18 to December 9. Announcing his intention of touring Europe next month to arrange for 250 European paintings, Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts, disclosed two major changes in the exhibition plans.

To provide a "more representative" jury for this year's thirty-second exhibition, it will be composed of an artist, an art director and an art critic. The jury was made up exclusively of artists last year.

Because of some confusion caused by listing the exhibitions in their numerical order, the trustees of Carnegie Institute have decided to identify future "Internationals" by the years in which they take place.

BRADDOCK CASH TO WELSH GIRL

Excepting 11 shares of United States Steel Corporation stock, the $27,000 estate of John Watkins, of Braddock, was left to his niece, Edith Doel, of Cardiff, Wales, in his will probated today. The stock was bequeathed to his sister, Mrs. Cecelia Bassett, of California.

Mrs. Minnie F. Cubbage, of Etna, left her $13,500 estate to her children. To her son, David, is left $2,000 and a house, the remainder is divided between Mrs. G. Trew, Ralph and David E. Cubbage.

The will of Edward G. Browne left a $7,250 estate to his nine children.

The $8,000 estate of Mrs. Mary K. Diehl was divided among her six children.

MAYOR'S CLERK SPIKES LOTTERY

An unidentified clerk in the Mayor's office was responsible for an alleged "numbers" writer being fined $5 in Central Police Court today.

Patrolman Edward Wortman testified that at the request of a man who said he was from the Mayor's office he arrested Mike Pavolic, 21, of 911 Spring Garden avenue, at Diamond and Smithfield streets yesterday. He was alleged to have written a number for a woman.

Pavolic was fined by Magistrate H. B. McNutt when the youth offered no explanation. Police said a numbers book and $2.43 change were found in his possession.

CITY PLANNERS TO QUIT JOB

L. W. Monteverde, for six years chairman of the city's Planning Commission, will send his resignation to Mayor McNair today, it was learned. No reasons for his resignation will be given in the letter.

Monteverde, one of the city's prominent realtors, has been a member of the commission for seven years.

For several years he has been active in the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association and the National Association of Real Estate Boards. He has also served as president of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Boards.

SOLES REPUDIATES CONFESSION

her husband, quoted the wife as writing:

"Keep your tail up and your nose clean."

After three hours of gentle questioning by Eaton, Soles was turned over to Prosecutor John Haggerty for cross-examination. Question after question the fighting prosecutor shot at the defendant trying to shake his story.

Only once did Haggerty succeed in tangling up the witness. That was in a cross examination of his financial affairs.

He testified that LaRoux sent him a check for $600 which he cashed, sending the money to her by wire.

Another check for $500 given to LaRoux a few months later he explained as a birthday gift from him.

LETTER FROM MARTIN

Soles began his narrative with the receipt of the begging letter from Martin to his wife the latter part of April last year.

It was about April 27 or 28, Soles testified. He identified the letter from Martin, signed "Mrs. William Sibley," and asking his wife for $40 to pay an anticipated hospital bill.

He said:

"I heard Mrs. Soles crying, so I jumped out of bed and ran into the living room. . . . She was lying on the floor with her head against the davenport."

His counsel, O. K. Eaton, asked:

"What did you do?"

"After speaking a few words, I—"

"Well, what did you say?"

"I said, 'Here, here, what's the matter?' . . . then, 'What's wrong, Spike?' and she said, 'It's that man, that letter.' I said, 'Well, it's no place for you on the floor.' I picked her up and carried her to the bedroom."

Then Soles went on to tell how he had heard his wife talking on the telephone to Martin the following day when the "boy friend" called to ask Mrs. Soles whether she had received the letter.

"When I walked up to her she looked up in an alarmed sort of way and put her hand over the transmitter. She said:

"'It's him.'

"I said.

"'Who?

"She said, 'Martin.'

"I said 'Let me talk to him,' and then I took the phone."

GIVES WARNING

After telling the person on the telephone he couldn't talk to his wife, Soles said he told Martin:

"Any skunk that bothers a woman like you're doing ought to be arrested."

Soles told of telegraphing LaRoux's brother, John Lynch for Martin's address in Florida. He said Lynch replied, giving him the name and address of Watt Martin, Mafield Court. He testified he sent another wire to Lynch. The wire follows:

"I did not ask address of Watt Martin, but I specifically asked for the address of William S. Martin stop. I want that address stop. Furthermore, I want know why he could call me on telephone this morning and use your name stop. Please be definite and specific."

The message was signed, "Robert S. Soles."

The courtroom was packed with spectators, the tipstaves having opened the doors into the corridor and allowed as many in as could stand behind the rail. Soles testified in a quiet, subdued tone of voice. His bearing, military-like and tense, stamped him as the former Army captain and prosperous real estate man.

Dressed in a slate-colored suit, double breasted and well fitted, he looked the part of a smartly togged business executive. His cheeks were ruddy and his modish glasses gave him an appearance of extreme gentleness.

CARRIES BABY BOOK

Soles' attorneys put him on the stand in the closing minutes of yesterday's trial and today they sent him right back.

There was a baby book in his hands—the diary which his wife kept of their son from the date of his birth in 1924 until his death two years later. His voice trembled in the hushed courtroom as he read the last entry his wife had written:

"Our darling left us Wednesday evening . . . one week before his birthday. My heart is broken."

Prosecutor John Haggerty today will shout such questions as these at Soles:

"Didn't you sign this confession? . . . Isn't it true that you propped your wife up in bed after you shot her and had her write that suicide note? . . . Didn't you grab your pistol from the chifforobe when LaRoux Soles accused you of being out with another woman? . . . Didn't you then go into the bathroom and read the comic strips?"

And Haggerty no doubt will have a question or two as to Soles' admitted drinking that night and as to his admitted visit to the apartment of Rose Hardy, whom he started to visit six months before his wife was shot.

FOUR HERE GET STATE JOBS

The governor's office has announced the appointment of four residents of the Pittsburgh district to state positions together with the dismissal of two others.

Those appointed include Arthur H. Heiber, Perrysville, messenger, Public Service Commission, $900; John S. Lohstoter, Pittsburgh, employment examiner, Labor and Industry, $1,860; Audrey Z. Mothersbaugh, Wilkinsburg, junior employment examiner, Labor and Industry, $1,380; Archie G. Gibsons, Swissvale, employment examiner, $1,860.

Those dismissed include James H. Young, Jr., Pittsburgh, controller, Labor and Industry, $4,080, and Albert W. Kunde, Dormont, building and loan examiner, $3,000. Sara Montgomery retired as a stenographer-clerk, Labor and Industry, $1,020.

POSTMISTRESS DEFIES COUNTY

Mrs. E. M. Robinson, postmistress of Large, is ready with a shotgun to prevent invasion of her property by county road workers, Leo Riordan, county investigator, reported to the county legal department today.

State route No. 51 through Large is being relocated by county workers. The proposed route would take more than half of Mrs. Robinson's property, consisting of seven-eighth of an acre, and would necessitate removal of a corner of her dwelling.

According to Riordan, the county offered to meet her price and to move both her postoffice-store and her little home, but she refused. Mrs. Robinson's husband is blind and she is the wage earner of the family, Riordan said.

Union Head Orders Pottery Strike End

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Feb. 20.—To break the unauthorized strike of certain union pottery workers, James M. Duffy, president of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, today attached $750 funds of subordinate locals. Duffy ordered the 500 men on strike—back to work in plants there and at Newell, Chester and New Cumberland, W. Va., by tomorrow morning, and declared if they did not return he would fill their places with other union workers.

Restaurant Men To Discuss Code

Members of the Western Pennsylvania Restaurant Association will discuss the signing of the new code for the restaurant industry at a meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel tonight. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m., followed by a business session which will be presided over by R. H. Jennings.

Fire Drives Families Into Zero Weather

Two families were driven from their homes in night attire into sub-zero weather when fire swept a two-story frame restaurant and grocery at 934 Second avenue, New Kensington, early today.

The blaze was discovered by Patrolman Tony Bordonaro. He turned in an alarm and awakened next-door neighbors. Fire Chief Edward Clawson estimated damage at $4,000.

28,366 Inspect 'Bullet' Train Here

Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad announced today that 28,366 persons viewed the Union Pacific's new streamlined train yesterday from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. in the Pennsylvania station. Approximately 2,000 more persons saw the train Sunday night and early yesterday. This is more persons than inspected the Royal Scot train, on exhibition here several months ago. Railroad officials say 28,391 inspected the Royal Scot.

McCANNS

One of our good customers stopped in our downtown store last Friday morning before 8:30. While chatting with one of our girls at the service desk, she remarked that she was waiting for Horne's to open. It was the first day of their anniversary sale and she wanted to be there early. "Do they really have good values at Horne's?" asked our salesgirl (just as if she didn't know). "You can always depend on Horne's and McCanns for good values" was the answer!

MEYER TO TALK ON SALES TAX TO WOMEN

The growing need of a manufacturers' sales tax to replace the federal income tax law will be discussed before the Washington birthday dinner-meeting of the Women's Political Educational Association, Thursday evening in Kaufmann's, by John D. Meyer, former United States attorney and now assistant state attorney general.

Mr. Meyer's long years in the United States district attorney's office enable him to speak with authority on the inadequacy of the income tax laws. During a recent radio address he pointed out that the government's long delay in calling for payment upon earned incomes was frequently the cause of taxpayers seeking means of evading the law.

The principal speaker of the meeting will be Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, who will discuss labor conditions.

Mrs. Sarah Braun, former member of the Pittsburgh Registration Commission, is chairman of the meeting.

INTEREST GROWS

Meanwhile interest in the enactment of sales tax legislation continues to increase as the time nears for a "showdown" in Congress. To the list of countless individuals in all walks of life—clubwomen, club presidents, clergymen, attorneys, real estate and industrial leaders today were added the names of numerous building and loan presidents and others.

George J. Geltz, president of the Crescent Building and Loan Association, of 323 Elysian avenue, said:

"I favor the sales tax because it would compel all of the people of the country to support the government. The income tax is too easy to evade."

Fred Gigler, president of the Triangle and Liedertafel Building and Loan Association, said:

"I have long urged the enactment of a manufacturers' sales tax to replace the income tax. It would be easier and less costly to collect, and all our citizens would share the burden of financing the government."

R. Maurice Trimble, architect, said:

"It is the most equitable tax and the most painless. It would be fair, whereas the income tax is class legislation."

SUCCESS IN CANADA

W. G. McCraley, president of the Chartiers Building and Loan Association:

"It has been a success in Canada, and I think it is our solution for obtaining needed governmental revenues."

Albert J. Schmidt, president of the Potomac Building and Loan Association, said:

"It is the most painless tax that we could have—it does not discriminate against anyone. I think it will be unfortunate if Congress does not enact the sales tax."

Thomas Edwards, president of the Brownsville Building and Loan, said:

"I'm very much in favor of the manufacturer's sales tax, because it would distribute the burden of taxation evenly. Under the income tax only a small portion of the population pays."

Workers Warned At Socialist Meet

A warning that American workers would have to fight for their liberties was sounded by Attorney Jacob Margolis at a meeting in Moose Temple, sponsored by the Socialist party, the Young People's Socialist League, the Central Labor Union and other labor groups.

The suppression of Socialist organizations under Austria's Dollfuss government was protested at the meeting by a standing vote.

things built in a day, abandoned perhaps next day, are as far from the white man's road as the Indians can put them.

Seminoles do not like white men and have only within the last few years decided to recognize Uncle Sam's ownership of Florida and not fight him any more. They gave him some of the hardest fights he ever had. In fact our government bought off the Seminole chiefs on certain occasions, finding that cheaper than fighting them.

THE SEMINOLE families form small groups on the "hummocks," high spots covered with trees, that rise above the flat glades. White men do not bother them there, not liking the "rattlers and moccasins" to be met on the way.

In the big flood from Lake Okeechobee, not long ago, snakes are said to have invaded the hummocks in thousands, driving away the fleeing whites and blacks that had taken refuge on them.

The snakes do not disturb the Seminoles, for they know when high water and pestiferous white men are coming, and move on in time to the highest hummocks. Also they understand snakes, and eat the good ones, including rattlers, so the snakes are afraid of them.

Indians keep away from whites for various good reasons, including one:

"With only Indians around, we can leave our property out anywhere. With one white man around, everything is stolen."

EIGHTEEN MILES south of this point you pass a small community, called Koershan Unity, with well-kept groves and gardens, and a population that lives much pleased with itself and its theory that we are all living on the inside of the earth, instead of the outside, as you probably suppose.

Our earth, they say, is "concave" and we are living inside the earth's outer crust, as though on an inside lining of an enormous croquet ball.

You may buy "The Cellular Cosmogony," 225 pages, one dollar, cloth bound, and have it proved to you, and if you will stop over half an hour Koershan will prove to you that YOUR science, religion and government "are built on quicksands."

MR. EDISON was much interested in this place because of his search for some rubber plant substitute, which he believed he found.

For variety of plant life this is the ideal spot. Mr. Joseph E. Smith, prominent citizen, is said to have on his place more different tropical plants and trees than can be found anywhere else in America.

Irritated Stomach Is Soothed and Relieved

By Tested Toma Tablet Course for conditions due to gastric-hyperacidity

"For ten years I suffered with severe pains in my stomach, almost screaming with agony. Spent much money on X-rays and examinations, which revealed that I had Gastric Ulcers. After taking three bottles of Toma Tablets started to get frisky and to eat things I liked without pain or ache," says Charles J. Olson, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Sufferers using the Toma Tablet Course are reporting unusual results. It has been pronounced by thousands as one of the outstanding scientific achievements of years for Stomach Ulcers, Gastritis, Gas Pains, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation and other stomach conditions induced by gastric-hyperacidity. A free booklet is now available, or send $1.00 for trial size bottle. Toma Inc., Dept. XH-24, Ligonier, Pa.

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS

IT takes more than a salve to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the pain and congestion when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application once an hour, blessed relief is often experienced in five hours.

Even better results than the never-failing old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions of people. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

MUSTEROLE BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

(Advertisement)

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows.

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, blasing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

LA ROUX'S LETTERS TO BOB READ

Katherine. She probably wanted to look things over so she could collect.

Did Bob and Herm say when they would be down? I wish they would be here when you come down we could have a lot of fun together. Do you know their St. Petersburg address?

Well old sweetheart the bed is calling me and I have run out of news. If you get too lonesome send out the SOS and I'll be on my way. I do miss you like the dickens, don't know how long I can stand it. You have been so sweet and I do appreciate your thoughtfulness of me.

The family send their best. I gave them your various messages and we all wish you a beautiful, happy and prosperous New Year.

As ever,

Your loving

(Signed) SPIKE.

P. S.—Tell Burnett hello for me. I almost forgot. I have written you three letters, did you get them all?

Envelope postmarked Miami, Fla., January 12, 1933—11:30 p. m., addressed to Mr. Robert S. Soles, 507 Locust street, McKeesport, Pa. Return address on back of envelope: Mrs. R. S. Soles, 590 Washington avenue, Miami, Fla.

LETTERS LOST

Wednesday P. M.

My dear Skinny:

Dad received your letter today and of course gave it to me to read. I can't understand about my letters to you as I have written you four and possibly five, and I sure do know where to send them. I wrote to you a few days ago, and you certainly should have that last one. No wonder, you think I have writer's cramp or something. To trouble to go through the throes of writing and, not have the letter delivered. I'll keep on though and maybe by chance you will get one once in a while.

Say, did that news about the $37½ dividend sound good? What on earth struck them. I went right out and jumped around in the ocean with glee. I think you had better deposit mine, my book was left to be balanced with Mr. Snedberg so he can put the dear delightful figures right in. Dad wants his sent down here. He can deposit it at the bank here at the beach. He is all smiles too and said he sure thanked you for everything including good news and license plates. Said he would write to you very soon.

All that news of cards, etc. arrived. Notice Bugs and beautiful Marie are still in California. Did you read Marg. Becker's note. They seem to be hard up like everybody else.

Helen Richey blew in last night. They returned from Havana yesterday. She sure is having a good time. I had given her money to get me some perfume, which she brought me. There was a whole carload of flyers and they were all set to go places. They were leaving this morning for their tour beginning at St. Petersburg. She looked fine.

ROMANTIC MOON

Beautiful day for swimming or jumping around as I do. Tonight is the berries, warm and beautiful moon. Makes me romantic but that doesn't do me any good.

The class of people on the beach is improving.

There is a gas war on now and John is having a fit. Just when he should be making money, he can't do anything. They will surely adjust things in a few days, as it would never do to have such conditions during the season.

Well, the dam dog is gone. He got in a fight and bit a man, so John had to dispose of him. Odessa is bellowing about it. Ye Gods, I don't know what they wanted with such an ill-tempered beast. If you try to hold him he will turn on you, I was afraid of him and so was Dad. It is all peace and quiet since his departure; before we were all on edge for fear he would get away and bite somebody.

What are you doing to amuse yourself in my absence? Have you seen any good movies? The evenings here drive me crazy. That's one reason I never wanted to be on the beach. They roll up the sidewalks at dark and there isn't a blame thing to do unless you are acquainted. Of course, if you had a good gang there would be plenty of places to go and not expensive either. Think I had better pick myself a nice gigilo, what say?

There really isn't much to write about, but I wanted you to know I was thinking about you, and wondering how you are old sweet? If you were here tonight we could go to a nice place I know and raise plenty whoopee.

The family send their best and here's lots of love and kisses.

SPIKE.

PROMISED LETTER

Not dated. Mailed from Miami, Fla., Feb. 17, 1933.

Thursday, P. M.

Dear Bob:

Am alone so thot I would write the promised letter. It is so hard to concentrate when they are all around and talking.

Dad and I called on the Snaiths last night. They have a beautiful apartment and are enjoying life de luxe. Don't think Cynthia looks very well, but it will take a little time for them to get settled down after the trip. Suzanne is fine and enjoying everything. Harry was scarlet with sunburn and I guessed he was in for a bad night. The sun has been scorching hot lately. We got a bit fed up on going to the beach so much, however I expect to go with the Snaiths some afternoon soon. Am driving Dad's car now so it isn't so difficult for me to get around.

Herbe Shearer has been in town for a few days. He has a very stunning girl and as usual is crazy about her. I think she knows how to handle him all right. He seems to be having quite a busy time in Tampa, but he told me he gets terribly homesick for the north and his old friends. He looks fine. Said he wrote to you but had not received an answer to his letter.

We have a new dog. A friend of John's gave it to him. A beautiful greyhould. Gentle as a kitten. He is a year old and next year will be in his prime for racing. Beautifully marked and a perfect gentleman. We are all crazy about him. He loves to ride in the car and sits still in one place just like a human.

LA RAUX SOLES' LOVE LETTERS TO BOB READ AT TRIAL

Odessa' aunt is in Miami and her father is coming next week for a visit so she is all pleased.

GOING TO DOCTOR

Sent you a wire when I got my money which I hope satisfied your fears. As I explained in my previous letter I have been going to the doctor for the old trouble. Have to go every other day. It is quite expensive but I don't care because he sure is fixing me up. I registered the letter to you because I didn't want the check to go astray and as long as I was at the P. O. anyway decided to see just how long it took by air mail. As far as the amount was concerned, I would rather have it down here where it is available than to be sending checks to be cashed and sent down. I expect to hang on to it as I usually have done. And after all, it is my own money. Let me know what it cost you to send it down and I'll send you a check. I still had some money but I didn't want to wait until I was too low. I pay the doctor for every visit.

Suppose the papers were full of the shooting at Roosevelt affair. That was very unfortunate, and nota very good beginning for him. Caused lots of excitement around here of course.

We received Frank's letter about the voting trust. We aren't crazy about signing it and note there were few names on it. What are you going to do about it? Wonder why they are reviving it?

Haven't heard a word from Helen Richey since she left. The trip must have been too much for her. From what Herbe said they had a wild time in Tampa. He was on the entertainment committee. Also have not heard from Harriet and Bob. In Edith's letter she said she expected to be down for a very short time the last of the month. She is much concerned about her property. We rode past there one day and it sure is dilapidated looking.

AWFUL MOB HERE

There is an awful mob of people here now. It is almost impossible to get accommodations anywhere on the beach, and I understand Miami is pretty well filled up. They are having a much bigger season than they expected.

Almost forgot to tell you. Herbe ran in to Charlie Simmons at Palm Beach. He is having a wild time I guess.

Haven't heard a word from L. C's from Ariz. I was glad to learn from Cynthia they were not afflicted with T. B.

Had a letter from Phila. They are planning to move back to Western ave., to cut expenses. It's a dam shame about them. Betty is waiting at their house for her baby.

How is your health, by now? Hope the old sinus is behaving.

Guess there's isn't any more news and I want to get this in the box before the ten o'clock collection.

Keep your tail up and your nose clean. As ever,

SPIKE.

P. S. Glad to hear your mother is feeling so well. Give her our best and tell her she owes me a letter.

FLOCK OF COMPANY

March 12, 1933.

My Dear Skinny:

Your letters to the various members of the family arrived in a bunch and were very much enjoyed. I believe, after all, it is a good idea to encourage you to use the typewriter, because you are so much bullier.

We have had quite a flock of company this week. Was very much surprised to see Bernard Volk Thursday. He gave us the news of the city in re the effects of the depression on the business of Locust street and environs. He looks heavier since I saw him last. I didn't inquire about the domestic difficulties.

Suppose you received Bob's card, so you know they were here. I was so surprised Friday afternoon when the two cars drove up and people started piling out. Thelma Bedell Ziezusheim and her husband, Bob and Henry and a Chuck Milliken from McKeesport with his girl. I didn't know the Milliken bird, but he seems to know you quite well. Why, I was so glad to see Bob and Henry. We all went up to the Snaiths' apartment in the evening, adjoined to the club house and danced home. It was one of those gorgeous moonlight nights at 12 o'clock, it was just like day.

Saturday morning we drove all around and showed them as much as we could in a short space of time. They, especially Bob and Henry, are certainly sold on this place. They said they weren't going to waste their time in St. Pete if they got down next winter. We wanted them to stay over Sunday and I think Bob and Henry would, if they hadn't the other couple with them. They were chaperoning the girl, and she had to get back. We wanted to take them to the Frolic's and give them an eveful. They expect to go north about the fifteenth of March to open the Inn the first of April. By the way, they told me the Curly Walkers are expecting a baby any day. No. 2 that is. Poor Curly is worried sick.

Told the Snaiths good-bye last night. They expect to leave Monday morning. The Brindels are still at the Braznell, also Mrs. Kinkard. That's a perfectly grand place to stay, such nice looking people and the Clubhouse is beautiful. I don't wonder they like to stay there, even if it is more expensive, the good time and nice surroundings is worth it.

Understand Billie Harvey had a daughter born last Sunday. She was crazy for a boy, so I guess she is disappointed.

WEATHER BEAUTIFUL

The weather has been beautiful lately, and the nights are like day. Not too hot but just right.

About coming home, I guess we will leave here the first of April. Dad doesn't want to get there before the weather begins to improve. He wants to go home for a short time to look after his business affairs and says he is going to the mountains and probably Murray Bay. He is sick and tired of it down here, and longs for a change. As far as I am concerned, I am ready to leave any time. I have had enough of it and how! I think Burnett had better start cleaning around the first of the month.

I am glad you had a good dinner with Helen and Coos. Isn't it strange she hasn't written to me since she left here. Some one said they read in the paper Coos was down here.

People sure have left here in droves since this bank business come up. Guess they are all scared. The races were over yesterday, so that will mean another general exodus. It's a damn shame for they were having a wonderful season.

Did you get my last letter with the signed note for the First National? I thought as long as I have one, I might as well send it on.

I don't know who Dad will get to drive us North. There are lots of men crazy for the job so it shouldn't be difficult. They will drive for $4 or $5 a week. I have to drive Dad's car, but couldn't stand a long trip and heavy traffic in the cities. I can better appreciate your feeling with my car, it will seem like a pee wee for once.

I'll bet your mother and the aunts are having a grand time and I think they will all be happy as clams together.

(Note: This next paragraph crossed out on original letter.)

Dad celebrated last night and has had a cute little bun today. He just called me and said he thought he would buy a certain house on Palm Island, which he had previously turned down cold. This is the first he has slipped up for ages, and he isn't bad. I think the cocktails he had the other night at the Braznell started him off.

Am glad you are feeling better. Bernard said you looked fine, but he would say that any way. The gang Friday thought I looked well, but very thin. I weigh 111 pounds now. I think I'll fatten up this summer. So many people get awfully thin here.

Haven't heard from Edith. Maybe she has changed her mind about coming down. She had better stay there and guard her job.

No more news so I guess I'll ring off till next time. Be a good boy and keep your nose clean.

Affectionately, as ever,

(Signed) SPIKE.

BOB TO LAROUX

March 24th, 1933.

Dear LaRoux:

I am enclosing various pieces of mail for you and your dad. Received your telegram yesterday and was very much pleased to know that you are feeling so much better. I dislike very much to leave here so suddenly, but feel it is necessary and I know that you will find everything in as good condition when you get back. There is a possibility that I might not be able to go away so quickly because of the fact that passage might be hard to secure, but I will be on my way just as soon as possible.

The enclosures are all the mail that I have in my possession for you. Much love to you and enjoy yourself.

BOB.

TREE PLANTERS LAUD HEARST'S SCHOOL AID

By a Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 20.—Atlanta school children planted a tree yesterday in Peachtree Creek Memorial Park as a living tribute to William Randolph Hearst for his unceasing loyalty to America's public schools.

Children from all schools of the city assembled to place the tree in the honor grove of the Georgia Bicentennial Forest, among a select group of growing memorials.

Principal speakers were Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools and former president of the National Education Association, who spoke on the subject, "Mr. Hearst and Public Schools," and Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, on "Mr. Hearst and Advanced Education."

SON SPEAKS

The publisher's son, John Randolph Hearst, of New York, arrived in the morning with his wife to witness the ceremony. They came to Atlanta from Palm Beach.

Mr. Hearst, who is president of the Atlanta Georgian Company and a former student at Oglethorpe University, represented his father at this remarkable testimonial to a consistent friend of public education.

Mr. Hearst spoke briefly, acknowledging the tribute. He said:

"On behalf of my father, whom I have the honor to represent, I wish to express my appreciation for this great honor the Atlanta school children do him."

Herbert Porter, general manager of the Georgian-American, also expressed his appreciation of the tribute.

TELEGRAM READ

Mr. Porter read a telegram from Mr. Hearst and declared it is remarkable that while Mr. Hearst is past 70 years of age he is more active now than ever before, his influence undimmed by the years.

The children designated for the honor began forming their groups hours before the time set for the ceremony.

Miss Hattie Rainwater, supervisor of nature study in the schools, was program chairman, and marshalled the children in their school groups, with their banners flying.

The children wore California poppies, which they made for the occasion.

The band from Tech High, under the leadership of P. S. Woodward, gave a concert from noon until 12:30.

GIRL DIRECTS PROGRAM

Reba Sellars, pupil of the Tenth Street School, was master of ceremonies. Her schoolmate, Wyndell Byrd, carried the official banner.

The box of good wishes to which hundreds of children contributed was placed in the ground beside the roots of the Hearst tree by Arthur Todd, of the Luckie Street School.

The group appointed to plant the sturdy American beech selected for the honor consisted of Olin Allen III, Goldsmith School; Lee Pierce, Couch School; Marjory McWaters, Sylvan Hills School; William Dillon, Key School, and Walter Vine, Davis Street School.

Dedication of the tree and placing of the tablet on it were in charge of Evelyn Hall, of the Maddox Junior High.

Despite the gray morning, a large crowd of relatives of students and friends of the schools went to the park for the ceremony.

UNIVERSITY PARTICIPATES

An impressive showing was made by the student body of Oglethorpe University, whom President Jacobs released from classes at 11 o'clock to attend this honor to a man who has been a benefactor of the university.

The students and faculty of Oglethorpe went en masse and heard their president pay tribute to the work of Mr. Hearst for higher education.

Hundreds of letters from school children were sent to Mr. Hearst to his San Simeon ranch. These expressed appreciation for the help he has given public schools in their fight to preserve the heritage of pioneer years.

The souvenir program, a booklet containing excerpts from editorials on the schools which have appeared in the Hearst newspapers, was distributed to the crowd at the tree-planting.

To William Randolph Hearst

We like to pay homage to outstanding men,
Who fearlessly speak for the right,
Who defend true convictions with confidence, when
The weak ones are losing foresight.

When political powers, inflated with greed,
Would deny the importance of schools,
The Hearst Publications, full knowing the need,
Denounce them, as arrogant fools.

Without overstatement, without reservation,
The Georgian has published the truth:
Upholding the banner of free education,
The hope of American youth.

So we honor you, first, for the service you've wrought,
In faithfully telling the news;
And honor you, next, for the lessons you've taught
By the wisdom and truth of your views.

We are planting a tree in your honor this day,
A sturdy American beech;
And how far in the future, who knows, who can say,
Shall the span of its usefulness reach?

As firmly we plant it, and bed it in deep,
That its rootlets may never know thirst,
We shall think of its namesake, and charge it to keep Faith with us, and with you, Randolph Hearst.

"Young tree," we shall tell it, "grow upright and tall,
And spread your beneficent shade
Where the feet of American children may fall
In beauty that never shall fade.

"Grow splendid and mighty, a tree among trees,
As your namesake, a man among men;
Teach the lessons of truth, in your growing, as these
Have been taught by the strength of his pen.

"Multitudinous foliage crowning your head,
With the beauty that God will bestow,
Shall speak of the beauty that his words have spread,
As far as the four winds may blow,"

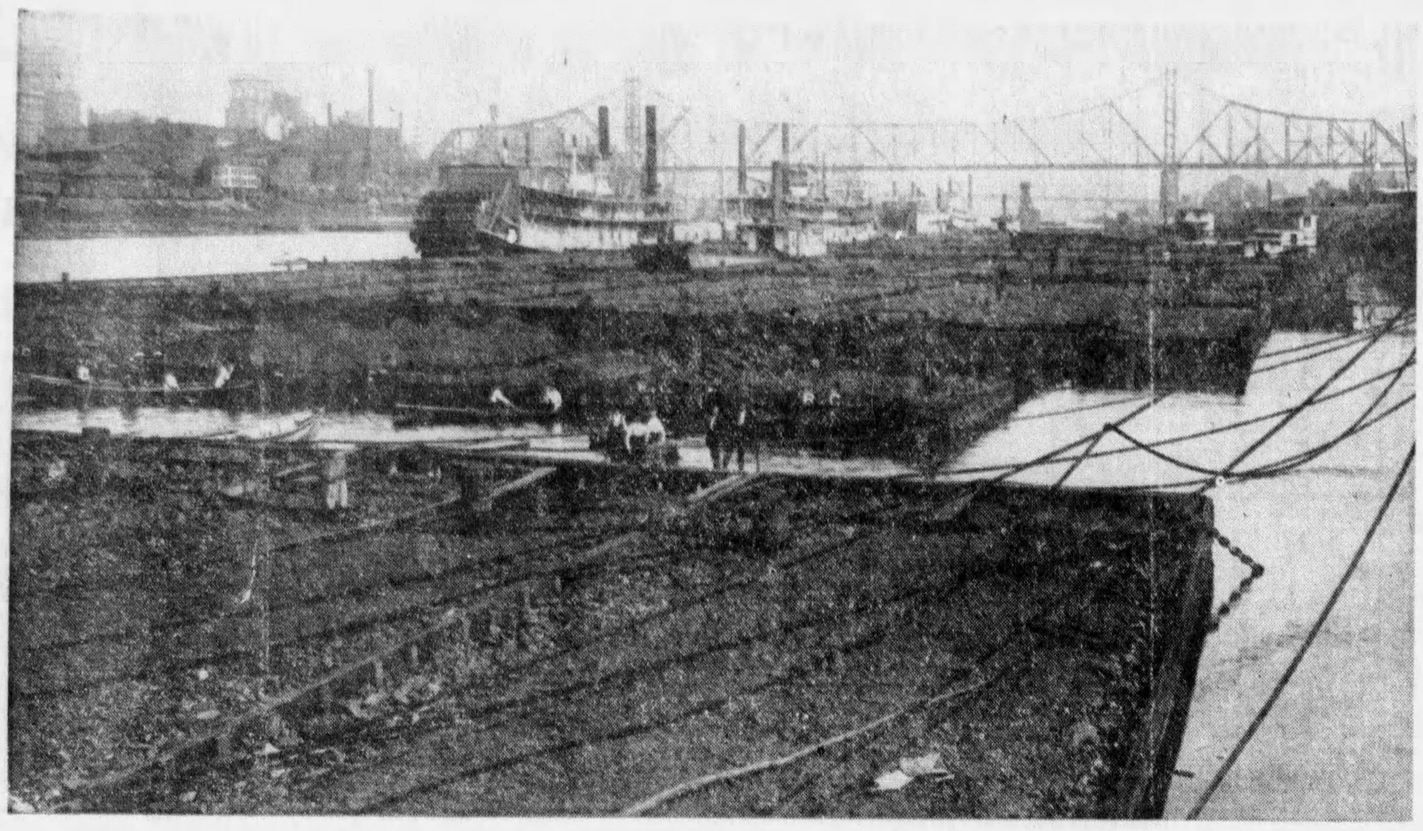
REMEMBER WHEN 812 DIED IN THE 'EASTLAND' DISASTER?

This is a Picture-Story of Dramatic Events, Personalities, Beauties, Customs and Fashions Within the Memory of Living Americans

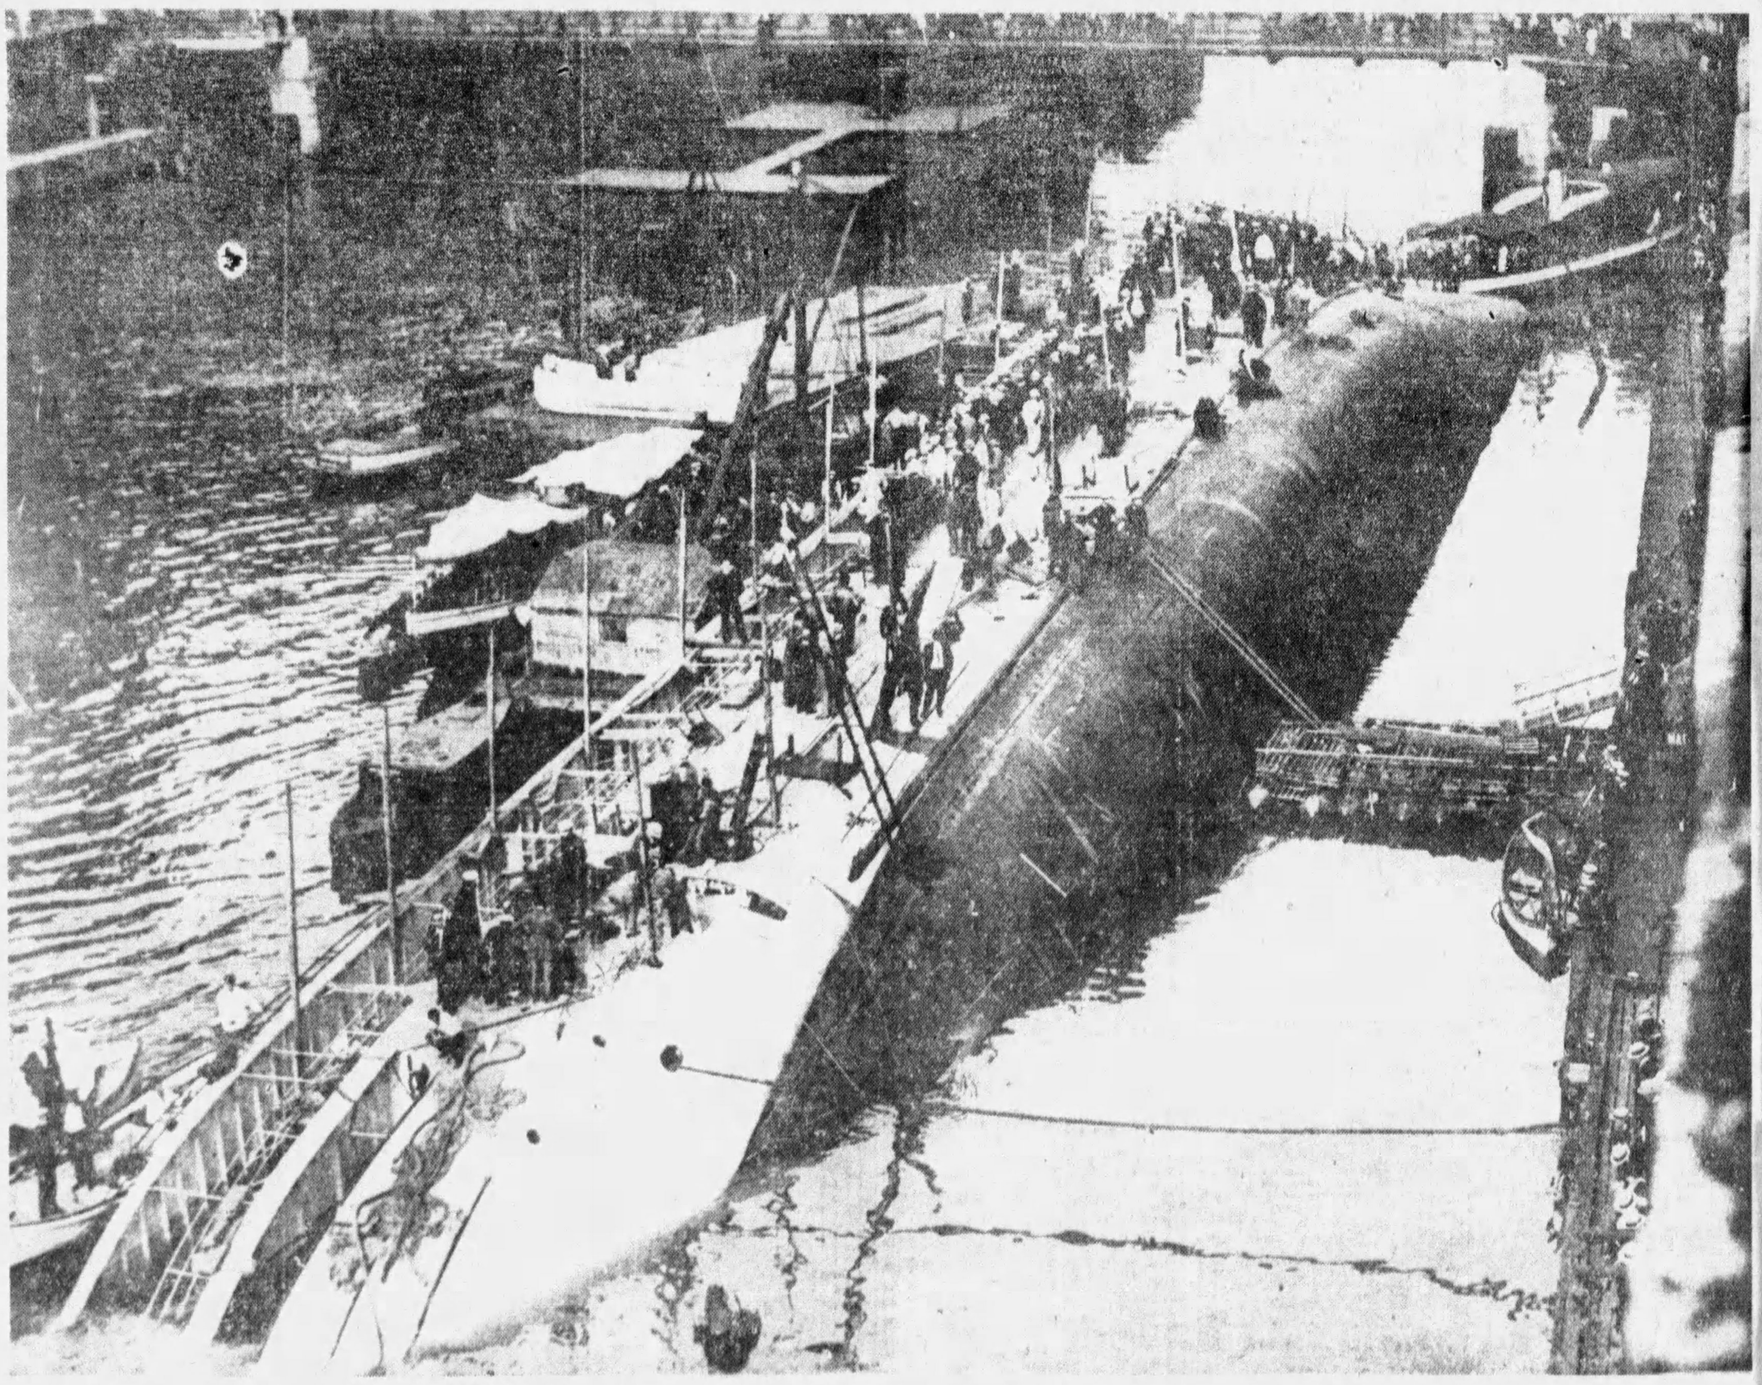


Remember when this was a common scene at the Port of Pittsburgh, a much busier river port of call in past decades? Here were tons and tons of coal waiting for a "river rise" to go to the South in September, 1905. H. J. Wittgaertner, 819 Ohio River boulevard, owns this photo.

Remember when "Helen Pigtails" started to tennis fame? Here at the age of 16 Helen Wills first competed in 1921 in the women's national tennis tournament.

Remember When "Divine Sarah" Bernhardt ruled the stages of the world? Death ended her long career in 1923.

Remember when the first U. S. airmail flight was made—in September, 1911, on Long Island over a six-mile course? Here Taft's Postmaster-General Hitchcock gave the first bag of airmail to Pilot Earle Ovington, flying in a frail craft.



Remember when the excursion steamer "East land" sank at Chicago on July 24, 1915? Hundreds were filing aboard for a picnic trip across Lake Michigan when a speed boat sped past in the Chicago River. Hundreds rushed to one side to see it, the "Eastland" capsized. Here rescuers who worked many hours picked out 812 dead.

Dean of Devil's Island Convicts Spurns Pardon

Gives Colony Credit For Saving Life From Opium

By GORDON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER XVIII

CAYENNE, French Guiana.

If you were to take a poll of the 7,000 prisoners and liberes in the 12 Devil's Island convict camps you'd find at least 50 who don't want to be pardoned.

They don't want to go back to France. They don't want letters from home and they don't want a lot of worthless sympathy gushed over them by sob-sisters.

The most spectacular of these is Benjamin Ullmo, "Dean of Devil's Island."

Ullmo spent a longer sentence on Devil's Island than the combined totals of any other three convicts in the history of the "dry guillotine"—including that of the tremendously ballyhooed Capt. Dreyfus.

He was 15 years on an island so small you can walk around it while smoking one cigaret. For part of that time he was its only occupant, more completely marooned than Robinson Crusoe.

For 11 additional years he was a first-class convict on the mainland. He has seen five generations of desperadoes come and go; for the average life is only five years, while Ullmo answered roll call from 1907 until 1933.

Last May he was pardoned. President Lebrun of France arranged for him to return to his native acres. But Ullmo, who has his own home, servants, motor car and adopted daughter in Cayenne, hasn't got around to the business of going home yet.

He thinks it would be just swell to sniff an apertif on the boulevards again, a grand idea to prowl through Montparnasse once more, but it's a long way . . . and it would be cold . . . and there would be nobody there who knows him because his family is long since dead . . . and after all the boys in stripes have come to know him as papa and . . . well maybe he'll go home next year and maybe he won't.

Ullmo, who is languidly philosophical about all things which have happened to him, blames his dive off the deep end on opium. He also declares that Devil's Island saved his life. And he has no regrets.

In 1902 he graduated from a French naval academy with honors and went to sea. He was 20 and Singapore in those days was Sinful Singapore, the cesspool of the East. Not the pink tea and pansy perfumed playground it is now.

Ullmo did the rounds and hit the opium pipe. He hit it hard. From one to five to 10 to 20 and eventually to 30 pipes a day. That not only burns a man out but plays tricks on the bank roll. And one of the things that goes with a 30-pipe appetite is a svelte sweetheart. And experts assure me that they too cost important cash money.

So Ullmo smoked up his salary, his savings and his allowance from wealthy parents. Then he got an inheritance and smoked that up. Then, to get more and more money he stole secret French naval plans and offered them for sale—back to the French—for $30,000.

The secret service jumped into action with spies. Lady spies. The very kind you find in the movies. Gorgeous blondes with champagne habits. You know the stuff. It was no time before the opium smoking Lieut. Ullmo faced a courtmartial.

"The sentence of this court is that you shall be banished for life to Devil's Island as a traitor to your country!"

So the greasy black Martiniere, the last surviving convict ship even in those days—and she is still in use—brought Ullmo to the home of the dishonored almost 27 years ago.

At first the cravings of the opium habit drove him screaming mad. He shrieked and beat his head but that didn't seem to help much. The craving wore off. He did a bit of gardening. He got permission to import books. He studied languages and is now chief interpreter for the entire colony. He learned seven tongues and is said to be one of the few men on earth who knows what the Einstein theory is all about.

Ullmo's pardon last year was largely a technicality. For all practical purposes he was a free man already.

He, like 100 others, was working and prosperous. Among other things he had a car, radio and well stocked library. But he could not leave the colony, could not vote, could not shake hands and could not be entertained in the homes of free men.

Throughout all his years in the colony, years in which 656 of the 670 who were his shipmates in the Martiniere died or disappeared, Ullmo has kept up one romantic correspondence, The girl he left behind him.

Throughoue these 27 years this grl has remained loyal, hopeful. It's said that she pleaded for the pardon. But Ullmo, as healthy a looking man as you'd like to see, doesn't speak of her. Rather he points to himself as an example of his self-coined slogan:

"Cayenne for contentment—Guiana for good health."

LAUDS HEARST DEFENSE PLEA

Adequate national defense is necessary for the safety of the nation, James E. Van Zandt, of Altoona, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said here today in praising efforts of William Randolph Hearst to arouse the American citizens to the need of preparedness.

Commander Van Zandt was guest speaker at a noon luncheon of the Baird-Atwood Post in the Nixon restaurant. Lauding the Hearst newspaper campaign on preparedness, the veterans' leader said:

"The Hearst campaign is fully indorsed by the V. F. W. Our organization stands for a large Army, Navy and Marine. We are not inviting war. Neither do we wish to have a controversy with any other nation. However, adequate defense not alone guarantees peace but saves the lives as a national measure.

"In the publication of war photographs, the lesson of suffering is carried direct to the citizen. It reveals the horrors and such a campaign is necessary to arouse the nation to understand the great necessity for adequate national defense."

Citing that the V. F. W. in seeking repeal of the National Economy Act wants the immediate payment of the bonus balance, Van Zandt said $24,670,659 would be released to Allegheny County alone.

Meanwhile, Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, has accepted an invitation to address the preparedness banquet to be held by the United Veterans' Association in the Elks Club Hhursday night. Other speakers will include Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite and Col. John Shenkel.

Two drills in National Guard armories and five radio programs are scheduled at today's contribution to National Defense Week in Pittsburgh.

Speakers are Capt. James O. Corbett, over Station WCAE at 4:45 p. m. and WJAS at 5:15 p. m.; Col. W. W. Gill and Lieut. C. C. McGovern, Jr., WWSW, 7:45 p. m., and another reserve officer, KQV at 1:45 p. m.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

So yesterday we talked of the "birdies that sing in the spring tra-la" and, zip! the mercury skids to zero which makes it look like spring is a long way off.

That doesn't necessarily mean that anything about the birds was entirely untimely.

When the north winds blow and along comes snow we can remind loyal Globe Trotters to feed the birds that hastened up here, maybe a bit too early, to sing a song of spring.

All is not lost, however, in the way of bird stories. Snow or no snow, Eddie Ray reports that on his farm he observed a woodpecker viciously attacking a pear tree. Eddie hopes he discovers oil.

Teddy Messenger, Wilkinsburg, must have lost all faith in the groundhog as a weather expert.

Strilling through Frick Park last Saturday he watched a groundhog snoozing in the spring-like sun, belying his reputation for holing up for another six weeks. I bet that groundhog was surprised yesterday.

We can't emphasize too greatly the suggestion for parents from Globe Trotter Mrs. J. C. Westman:

"Explain to children the danger of running, jumping, skipping, or participating in any violent form of activity while lollypop suckers are protruding from their mouths."

Note to the young man who needs the artificial limb: Get in touch with me, or Miss Bales, by calling Grant 6500.

Maude Adams Retiring From Air

Probably no event since the beginning of the year bestirred radio circles more than the entry of Maude Adams upon the radio scene.

And now Miss Adams will arouse further interest by proving to be the celebrity with the briefest radio career, for she is making her final broadcast (at least the final one for her present patron) on March 2.

On that date, the series which introduced her comes to its climax. There was every expectation that the sponsor would renew his contract, but it turned out otherwise.

It is reported that the plays introduced by Miss Adams, which dated back to her prime, did not intrigue the audience on the scale anticipated.

Particularly the younger element which had little or no recollection of the Sir James Barrie works as interpreted years ago by Miss Adams.

DAFFYNITIONS

In trying to assist the irrepressible Ray Perkins last week in the matter of compiling his dumb radio dictionary, I invited contributions and learned my lesson.

Since then a helpful public and a more energetic group of radio artists have swamped this little helper with what may properly be called "daffynitions."

The Hazelwood branch of the Socialist party will hold a meeting in Hazelwood School, Second avenue, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. William J. Van Essen, Socialist candidate for mayor in the [illegible] election, will give an illustrated lecture on "The Struggle Between Socialism and Fascism in Austria."

Thor Breaks the Bonds of IRON SLAVERY!

Don't iron the old way! The average family ironing requires you to lift 3 tons of dead weight and move your arm 6½ miles. Let this Thor automatic ironer do the work. Just sit down. Thor does the rest. Automatic knee control permits use of both hands. Open end allows ironing of everything from shirts to sheets. Let us demonstrate.

COLDS

Go Overnight

When You Take The Right Thing!

A cold doesn't have to run its course and expose you to serious complications. A cold can be routed overnight if you go about it the right way. First of all, a cold being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. Secondly, a cold calls for a COLD remedy and not for a "cure-all."

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and beware of dealers who offer substitutes.

DON'T BLAME YOUR GROCER

IN fairness to retail grocers throughout the country, we feel called upon to make a frank statement to the housewives of America.

During recent months thousands of you ladies have experienced difficulty in obtaining two new varieties of Heinz Homestyle Soups—Cream of Mushroom and Noodle Soup. This has not been your grocer's fault. We are to blame. Here are the facts:

We had made a few varieties of soup for many years, when we decided to expand our line. We didn't do this overnight. It came as the result of unusual and interesting recipes evolved by our chefs over a long period.

The new varieties of Heinz Soups met almost instant success—made good on thousands of tables. But when we added the last two—Heinz Cream of Mushroom Soup and Heinz Noodle Soup—something unexpected happened. These two soups took the country by storm. Grocers reported amazing sales. Thousands of letters poured in. At this same time, sales of our other varieties of soup doubled and trebled—and we suddenly found ourselves really in the soup business!

This presented a problem. Tremendous demand could not be met by merely installing additional equipment. Long ago we learned that good soup must be made in small batches—slowly simmered so that the delicate, elusive vegetable and meat flavors are retained. All the ingredients must be painstakingly selected and the spicing and seasoning done with utmost care. It is a slow, meticulous process by which Heinz chefs uphold traditional Heinz quality. So we honestly have not been able to catch up with the demand for these two soups until now. Two shifts have been working in our kitchens for months to supply you. Hereafter we believe you'll be able to obtain these soups at most grocers.

Many grocers have had numerous shipments of Heinz Cream of Mushroom Soup and Heinz Noodle Soup—but it is hard to keep them in stock. So it is possible that you may have experienced occasional difficulty in obtaining these two varieties. We regret this—but trust that this statement will explain the reason and remove from your mind any thought that your grocer has been negligent in his service to you.

So many dealers have been blamed by housewives for failing to stock these two new soups that we felt called upon to explain the true situation. We have known your grocer for many years. No one works harder or more conscientiously to serve you. His interest is a natural and sincere one. He would gladly have kept these two soups in stock if he could have obtained them. So don't blame him. It's our fault. Blame us for our stubborn, old-fashioned ideas about quality—and for our pride in anything that bears our name.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

Needs No Cooking! Big Saving!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money, yet it is far more effective than ready-made medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Do as your dentist does . . .

when he cleans your teeth

USE POWDER

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter. Free from all grit or pumice, it cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums and the least possible tooth decay.

Once you use powder you will never go back to a less scientific way of tooth cleansing. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

Things I Wouldn't Have Known

(If Gordon Sinclair Hadn't Told Me).

That at Peshawar, the only forbidden city in the British Emparh, is a golf club, where every bunker holds a machine gun pill box. The course which faces the Khyber Pass is patrolled by cavalry and at six p. m. they dingle a curfew bell, and call the mashie wielders in to the 19th Hole.

And at one of the Delhi courses there's a sign: "Beware of Snakes in bunkers!" And at Cawnpore you use three caddies—one to tote the bag, one to carry the umbrella, and one to go ahead with a mongoose on a leash so that snakes won't nip your ankles if you stray.

That in Java the choo-choos go 80 miles an hour by day. (But they are forbidden to run after sundown.)

That Gordon Sinclair, who promised to send in this sort of stuff while he tours the world for his paper (The Toronto Star) has kept his word, so thanks, before I forget.

That Kabul, capital of Afghanistan, has a 10 p. m. curfew law, and anyone found outside after that—or before seven a. m. gets jugged. And anyone found with a flask on his hip gets six years in jail.

That white folks can't own or rent land or houses in Kashmir. (So they live on houseboats in the Shalimar.)

That the Gurkhas, those pocket "battleships" in that area, are the only non-British fighting men under the British flag. They're from Nepal and carry, among other death tools, weighted knives which can lop off a human head as you would nip a tulip. (Such manners!)

That some of India's highest Brahmins charge pilgrims for the pleasure of looking at them! And one of the greatest sources of personal revenue is selling their own (used) bath water.

That 2,000 human bodies are burned on the banks of the Ganges every day and their charred remains thrown into the soupy stream where ten million pilgrims bathe every 24 hours. (Yet that water is pure!)

If you put a vial of typhoid germs into it and watch them under a glass you'll see them shrivel and die. (If you put another vial into the water of New York, Boston or Philly, they'll live and multiply!)

That in Borneo if a wild beast or crocodile kills a man or boy they track him down, slaughter and bury him with full ritual because the man or boy is inside. (But girls don't count.)

That a rogue elephant on the rampage is almost invariably driven that way thru having no tail. A big bull's idea of a good time is to pull out the tail of a young buck in the herd.

That flies lay eggs in the wound—these hatch into maggots which drive the young tusker frantic and he goes on a tear.

That Lord Willingdon, viceroy of India, holds the power of life and death over more humans than anyone else in all the history of time. His powers are far greater than the powers of the King. And he is the first viceroy of India who doesn't have an elephant. What do you think of that?

That Geisha girls, who are supposed to be wikkid, have as high a sense of morality as choir girls.

That when a man dies in India his widow is forever afterward disgraced. She has to bare her breast, smear herself in ash and become the servant of her own servants or her mother-in-law.

That in Guiana the father's name is never asked when a baby's birth is listed.

That tigers, which are big cats, can swim, but no can climb trees. The biggest tigers are not striped and never were. They can stand a temperature of 40 below zero without even shivvering. (You can't do that!)

That in Baluchistan's "Valley of the Living Dead" pilgrims come once each seven years to visit the monks in self-chosen tombs.

The visit lasts three days, during which the pilgrims live on goat stew cooked in great cauldrons. On the third day the oldest monk in the group voluntarily strips, bathes and jumps into the boiling stew to flavor it—I suppose . . . Then the others all feast on him.

That at least 50 convicts in the Devil's Island colony are married—living with their own wives.

That once every five minutes each day and night year in, year out, somebody dies of snake bite in India. On Easter day, 1932, Mr. Sinclair saw four killed by one krait at Lucknow. (Luck, my eye!)

That right now, at this very second, two million people are pleading and praying that they may die at Benares, the holy city of India. If they do die there—they believe they come back to earth at once stronger, cleaner and younger than they were before. More than 2,000 Indian families have bungalows there—used only when some relative is dying. If the house is empty you know the entire family is well.

Acting by Son Banned by President

By GWYNN

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—Well, it looks as though the moving picture business opened its mouth and put its foot in it. That flying trip that Elliott Roosevelt took to Washington was to ask his famous father about whether or not he should take a job in the picture industry that had been offered to him.

The offer of the job was all right, but the salary of $1,000 per week was what staggered the President and he turned thumbs down on the whole thing. Not that the President objected to his son working for the movies, but he can't see where an inexperienced person rates $1,000 a week.

The importance to Hollywood in the story is the fact that it isn't going to help the industry's cause any in arguing against salary control to have a specific offer of four figures so close to the President's own knowledge and acquaintance of the value of services.

Pat Patterson is a young, blonde, beautiful English actress whom Fox brought over here for picture work. She hasn't been seen enough to be well known in American picture audiences, nevertheless, her first big role will be a co-starring one with another English player, Herbert Mundin, when "Call It Luck" goes into production. And the idea of co-starring the little gal is not such a bad one, because when she walked into the Vendome for lunch the other day with Dorothy Mackaill, nearly every man in the place called the head waiter over to ask him if he knew the name of the attractive blonde with Miss Mackaill. Which gives you a rough idea of the lady's appeal.

Aline MacMahon is about to reap the reward for having saved or stolen so many pictures in the past couple of years. With the production of the "Happy Family," Miss MacMahon gets star rating. The story, incidentally, is one written by Gene Markey, and one wonders whether that title was inspired by the fact that Gene is about to become a father at any moment and possibly "by the time you read this."

* * *

There's one thing about Paul Lukas—he's a methodical person who has very definite ideas about working hours and when they should stop. The other evening as he was preparing to leave the set, an executive approached him with a sheepish smile.

"We'll have to work a little overtime tonight, Mr. Lukas. I hope you'll play ball with us, Yes?"

"I'm an actor, not a ball player," answered Lukas, and he walked off the set.

Notes About New Films

Edward G. Robinson and Glenda Farrell have the leading roles in "Dark Hazard," photoplay opening tomorrow in the Enright.

"All of Me," with Frederic March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft and Helen Mack in the featured roles comes to the Penn Friday. March plays a professor who is in love with Miss Hopkins, a student, who is afraid that marriage might wreck her romance. On the stage will be "The Century of Progress Revue," with Ripley Oddities.

Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Ida Lupino, Robert Armstrong and James Gleason have the principal roles in "Search for Beauty" screen attraction, opening Friday in the Stanley. Ben Bernie and his radio orchestra will be seen and heard on the stage.

"I've Got Your Number," with Joan Blondell as a private exchange telephone operator will come to the Warner Friday. Pat O'Brien, a telephone repairman, gets her a new position when she loses her job, for unwittingly helping a crook, and then she makes the same mistake a second time.

Warren William and Jean Muir head the cast of "Bedside," photoplay coming Friday to the Davis and Regent, where a second feature will be W. C. Fields in "Tillelie and Gus." In Bedside" William, practicing as a surgeon, has to reveal himself as a fake. Miss Muir plays a nurse with whom he is in love.

William Powell and Bette Davis will be seen in the featured roles in "Fashion Follies of 1934," comedy with music and spectacular scenes, coming to the Sheridan Square screen Friday.

"Broadway Peek-o-Boo," stage presentation with a cast featuring Inez Gamble, dancer, Al and Ted Waldman, comedians and Lon Tack Sam's Oriental entertainers, will be seen in the Pitt Friday. On the screen will be "Buster" Crabbe and Mary Carlisle in "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

* * *

"Should Ladies Behave," featuring Lionel Barrymore and Alice Brady, coming to the Fulton screen at the conclusion of "Palooka," is a photoplay version of the farcical stage comedy, "The Vinegar Tree," in which Mary Boland starred.

MIRIAM HOPKINS DALLIES WITH MARRIAGE PROPOSAL IN "ALL OF ME" — IN PENN FRIDAY

'Too Hot for Paris' Show in Variety

"Too Hot For Paris," featuring Naoma Dusk, is the current Variety offering that has seven feminine principals. Miss Dusk, new to Pittsburgh, is the headliner among the steppers. Georgia St. George, held over from last week, offers the "Dance of the Veils." Among the other dancers are Mildred De Voe, Estelle Montilla, Eleanore Johnson, Babe Davis, Gladys Fox and Wilma Horner, the latter a Pittsburgh girl. Skits include "Girls Are Like Jewels," featuring Billy Elliott, tenor; "Prisoner of Love" and "Southern Bells." Eddie Kaplin, Bimbo Davis and Sam Smith are featured comedians. The chorus of 18 girls contributes its quota of dance numbers.

Durante as Fight Manager In Fulton's 'Palooka'

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Laugh you must, forget your troubles you will, you can't help yourself, while enjoying that "suave personality," Jimmie Durante, who dominates "Palooka," in its world premier at the Fulton this week.

"Palooka" doesn't try to follow its comic namesake; with the exception of Joe and Knobby Walsh it chooses its own characters, makes its own plot. And the plot, keeping in mind the actors, is fittingly light and keenly funny. It centers around the adage, "Like father, like son," with Robert Armstrong, champion Pete Palooka, who has let success go to his head, and Stuart Erwin, his son, Joe, also a champion (though by a fluke), and likewise afflicted with win-itis.

Schnozzle is Manager Knobby Walsh, who finds Joe tending pigs and cows and chickens and persuades him to come to the big, bad city from which his mother (Marjorie Rambeau) has been protecting him all his life. In the city there awaits a siren in the form of Lupe Valez, who has a habit of making champions her meal tickets, and when Joe makes the winning knockout, she has no trouble in persuading him to replace the fallen champ (William Cagney).

Marjorie Rambeau is grand as Mayme Palooka, one-time of the stage, and later model mother of Joe. She handles her part with a dry ease that is worth a laugh every time—and gets it. Lupe Velez sways and eyes her way through her role, which calls for some pretty slithery vamping.

Stuart Erwin makes his Joe a very credulous sort of person, just a little dumb, and oh, so very green, who, emboldened by the clinging Lupe, defies even his manager, nosey, noisey Walsh. He is finally brought to his senses and marries the sweet little girl back home, Mary Carlisle. But no fadeout kiss in "Palooka," for as it begins, it ends, with a laugh that Schnozzle manages uproariously.

In the educational line, and to give your face a rest there is an excellent short, "A City of Wax," which tells a pictorial story of the life of a hive of bees, as well as flashes of the happenings of the day in a Hearst News Reel. "Get That Tiger" is the comedy short which goes musical in a humorous way.

SALES TAX HELD GUARANTEE OF FAIR LEVY

This is the second of two articles dealing with the logic and visibility of national sales taxation, written by a recognized specialist in questions entering into the raising of federal revenue.

By JAMES A. EMERY

(General Counsel National Association of Manufacturers.)
(Written for the Hearst Newspapers.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—In the previous article, we examined the proportion of our national income—that is, of the total value of the goods and services produced by the American people which were taken by all forms of government to support their activities.

This we found was of an amount which, translated into the effort to produce it, meant that everyone was required to work for the government for not less than two and a half months a year. We found that the various forms of government under which we lived obtain their funds either by direct taxation or by deferred taxation.

The first method meant the direct taking of money from the citizen. The second meant borrowing from the citizen, paying interest on the loan and providing a fund to repay the debt.

COST OF GREAT WAR

The great war cost the United States about $40,000,000,000 of direct expenditure. Of course, that does not represent the entire cost, for that war, like every other, left behind it a permanent debt in the shape of pensions for its injured and the dependents of the dead. But

Of that direct cost about $15,000,000,000 was raised by direct taxation. The remainder was borrowed from our people to pay our debts and those of our allies. In the prosperous years after the war we reduced that debt to less than $17,000,000,000, although our allies paid very little of their debt to us and now pay none at all.

But, after the war, the states and their subdivisions began to borrow to engage in many activities which soon caused their debts steadily to increase, while those of the national government were growing less, until the depression fell upon us.

WASTE PREVENTABLE

The federal government then was gradually required to assume more and more of the work of relief by providing direct aid, work and credit, until now it has become the chief source of public expenditure. It will therefore become the chief source of taxation.

Heavy taxation is unavoidable, but waste can be prevented by the vigilant interest and protest of the taxpayer and by his insistence that methods of taxation shall be adopted which will fairly distribute its burdens and make the tax itself more clearly visible to those who pay it.

What can be fairer than to distribute our taxes over the whole surface of our activities instead of over a few of them? In other words, to levy a tax on all sales instead of a few sales. If this were done, it would have many great advantages.

LOW RATE POSSIBLE

The taxpayer, instead of paying a great variety of hidden taxes, would know the amount of tax due upon the article purchased and could not be made the victim of any excessive charge said to rest upon taxes. A widely distributed sales tax could be had at a very low rate.

The practical experience of mankind reinforces the argument which rests upon the very nature of the tax. For, gradually, one country after another has turned to the sales tax as the fairest, the most reliable, the simplest and the most acceptable method of raising a large body of revenue with the least individual burden.

Congress is about to consider a new tax bill. Why should it not imitate the example of 30 other countries and levy a fair and visible sales tax?

Alvan E. Duerr, personnel director of the Manufacturer's Trust Company, New York, will address the diamond jubilee banquet of Delta Tau Delta at the Schenley Hotel, Saturday, March 3. Other speakers to commemorate the founding of the national college fraternity will be Secretary of War George H. Dern and United States Senator Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri.

'Mazeppa' to Be Sung In Mosque Tonight

The opera "Mazeppa," by Tschiakowsky, will be heard for the first time in Pittsburgh in Syria Mosque tonight. The libretto is based on the epic poem of Pushkin, and concerns the political situation created by the alliance of Mazeppa with Charles XII of Sweden against the Russian Czar, Peter the Great. The leading soprano role will be sung by Thalia Sabanieeva, loaned as guest artist by the Metropolitan Opera. Other singers include Alexis Tcherkassky, Mikhail Shvetz, Elena Bussinger, Dimitri Kriona, Michel Dilov, and M. Didiwich. There will be a ballet under the direction of Dimitri Chutro. The company comes to Pittsburgh under the auspices of the Ukrainian Art Theater.

Mrs. Agnes Cipra.

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes Cipra, 72, were held in St. Aloysius' Church, Wilmerding, this morning. She died Saturday at her home, 329 Grove avenue, East McKeesport.

Mrs. Cipra was born in Czechoslovakia, and came to Pittsburgh when a girl. She had lived in East McKeesport 50 years.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Josephine Mertz and Mrs. Annie Stanger, and four sons, Frank J., George, Amos E. and Ernest L. Cipra, and a sister.

Mrs. Elizabeth Watson

Mrs. Elizabeth Watson, 82, died yesterday at the home of her son, John B. Watson, of 5553 Forbes street. Mrs. Watson, a resident of Pittsburgh 35 years, was born in Middletown, Pa., April 29, 1851. SKINNY SCRAWNY FOLKS ADD ALLURING POUNDS ...this quick new way!

Read How Amazing Mineral Concentrate, Richest in Newer Form of "FOOD IODINE," Is Building Up Thousands of Nervous, Skinny, Rundown Folks Where All Else Fails

3 to 8 POUNDS in 12 days! 5 to 12 pounds in a few short weeks. Think of it! Yet these results are not unusual. Hundreds of skinny, scrawny rundown people are amazed at this outstanding new natural way to win back health and weight.

Doctors know how vitally necessary are natural food minerals often so woefully lacking in even the most carefully devised fresh vegetable diets. Unless your system gets the proper amount of these minerals, many of them needed in only the tiniest quantities, even the best food fails to nourish you, fails to build rich, red blood, firm flesh and sturdy muscles. This lack of mineralization results in the failure to digest starches and fats in the normal diet. It makes no difference whether your appetite is good or bad, your food is converted into poisonous wastes instead of firm flesh and tireless energy.

New Mineral Discovery

Scientists, however, have only recently discovered a marvelous source of practically every single mineral essential to body needs. It is called Kelp-A-Malt, a pleasant, easy-to-take vegetable concentrate made from a luxuriant sea plant from the Pacific Ocean. It provides iron, sodium, calcium, phosphorus and other essential minerals in easy assimilable form, and also provides the effect of Vitamins A, B, D, E and G.

Supplies Newer Form of Food Iodine

Most important of all, it is the richest known source of the newer form of food iodine—natural iodine, not made from iodides or other chemicals which oftentimes prove toxic, but the same iodine that is present in spinach and lettuce and which is required by the blood, liver and other vital organs. It is the lack of this iodine which experts in nutrition say is our foremost national food problem.

Kelp-A-Malt vs. Vegetables Mineral Comparison

3 KELP-A-MALT TABLETS CONTAIN

1 More Iron and Copper than 1 pound of spinach or 7½ pounds of fresh tomatoes or 3 pounds of asparagus, for rich blood, strength, energy.

2 More Phosphorus than ½ pound of carrots for sturdy bones, strong white teeth.

3 More Calcium than 1 pound of cabbage, for resistance to disease—warding off colds, etc.

4 More Iodine than 486 pounds of spinach, 30 pounds of fish, 660 pounds of beef, for preventing goitre, glandular disturbances and improving reproductivity.

5 More Sulphur than 2 pounds of potatoes, for prompt elimination.

6 More Sodium than 3 pounds of turnips, for correcting stomach, gas and acidity.

7 More Potassium than 6 pounds of beans, for improving heart and liver action.

8 More Magnesium than 1 pound of celery, for clear skin and pure blood.

Try Kelp-A-Malt for a single week. Watch your appetite improve, firm flesh appear in place of scrawny hollows. Feel the tireless vigor and vitality that Kelp-A-Malt provides through its easily assimilable iron and copper. Its calcium and phosphorus build strong teeth and bones. Its sulphur and phosphorus assure proper elimination. 6 tablets provide more iodine than 486 pounds of spinach—assures protection against goitre.

A few weeks' Kelp-A-Malt treatment not only improves your looks but your health as well. It quickly corrects sour, acid stomach. Gas, indigestion and all the usual distress commonly experienced by the undernourished, underweight disappear. Contains no yeast—doesn't cause bloating.

AUTOIST SLAYS GIRL; RUNS OVER BODY

International News Service.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 20.—Her face slashed and mutilated by blows from a heavy instrument, her body crushed by her slayer's automobile, Wilhelmina Blume, 15-year-old Jersey City school girl, lay dead today in Newark City Hospital, victim of one of the most brutal murders in local police annals.

While two horrified witnesses on a nearby railroad embankment watched through a curtain of falling snow, which half obscured the grisly scene, the girl was dragged from an automobile by a man companion.

As the witnesses, Hilding Kinhult, East Orange carpenter, and Fred Hanson, West Orange watchman, shouted and scrambled down the embankment to halt him, the man drew a weapon from his pocket, smashed the girl savagely on the face and head, then leaped back into the car and deliberately drove it over her body, battering it almost beyond recognition.

The body lay in the hospital morgue all night while police strove to learn the girl's identity.

Emma Blume, 38, of Newark, came to police headquarters today to report that her sister had left home late yesterday and failed to return. Detectives led her to the morgue, where she almost collapsed as she identified the victim of the brutal slaying as that of her schoolgirl sister.

Wilhelmina, Miss Blume told detectives, left home last evening to deliver a note to a woman friend of the elder sister.

She vanished into the snowstorm and never arrived at her destination.

Police believed she accepted a "lift" from a strange motorist, and, the police theory is, the stranger made advances which the girl resisted and which cost her life.

SUSPECT HELD IN GIRL'S DEATH

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Frank Bennett, 23, South Boston laborer, was taken into custody in Somerville late last night by police investigating the slaying of 14-year-old Victoria David and immediately brought to this city for questioning. He was booked as a suspicious person. Police said his face and hands bore scratches.

Several witnesses were brought to the station who were said to have seen the girl talking with a well-dressed young man in a theater lobby shortly before she disappeared Sunday.

Police Capt. James R. Claflin told newspapermen he believed the case "near solution."

The body of the girl, a victim of attack, was found in a shallow excavation yesterday by a policeman.

Two Boys Injured In Coasting Mishap

Carl Kobsi, 10, of Cheswick, was in a serious condition in Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington, today, suffering from injuries suffered when his sled crashed into a tree while coasting down a hill near his home late yesterday, it was reported. His skull was fractured.

Leroy Heckman, 5, of North Apollo, who was riding with him, suffered a fractured nose. His condition was reported as "good."

"No Boat Rocking" Old Slogan in New Race

By MARK SHIELDS

Former Congressman Guy E. Campbell today announced himself as a candidate for his old post in the Thirty-fourth District, planning to run in both the Republican and Democratic primaries. After long service he was defeated in 1932 by Matthew A. Dunn, who ran as a Democrat after both he and Campbell, as well as many others, had contested in both primaries.

Mr. Shields

The announcement by Mr. Campbell may set the pace for statements by other candidates in other districts. He maintains an air of strict non-partisanship, leaning if anything toward a declaration with a tinge of the Democratic.

For example, he says:

"The immediate future will require constructive and sympathetic co-operation to insure complete victory and readjustment. This I vouchsafe in full measure.

"The President is performing a monumental task with a vision and sureness which must succeed—a task comparable and as vital to the Rejublic as that perfomed by the immortal Lincoln.

"It is our duty as patriotic Americans to give him our undivided and unwavering support in his recovery program. All will benefit.

"The crisis through which the nation is passing is far too serious for rocking of the boat or the display of petty politics. Let's all pull together.

"The emergency demands that we put country and the common good above all other considerations."

Mr. Campbell says he asks election again purely on his record of service. The tone of his announcement indicates that even should he receive a Republican nomination, and be defeated in the Democratic primary, he would refrain from criticism of the President.

Regular Democrats Look Kindly on Dunn

Present indications are that Congressman Dunn, also a candidate in both primaries, will have the support of the regular Democratic organization. Other candidates are entering the field, which promises to be cluttered by May 15.

A real fight is loooming in the state Senatorial district comprising the seven North Side Pittsburgh wards, and now represented by Senator Morris Einstein. The veteran Senator intends to bea candidate again.

J. Boyd Euwer, former treasurer of the Republican county committee, and in the last municipal primary treasurer of the campaign of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, seeking the mayoralty nomination on the Republican ticket, has told friends that he is in the humor to be a candidate.

Speaking yesterday Mr. Euwer said it was his intention to run in both the Republican and Democratic primaries, a prevalent habit in this year of uncertainty as to which party is going to be the top dog next November.

Such elements of the Leslie strength as remain are undoubtedly counted upon by Mr. Euwer for assistance, and he had friendly relations with the party wing led by the late County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

In 1930, Mr. Euwer had thoughts of contesting the place of Senator Einstein, but was dissuaded by Mr. Armstrong, who, with his own election coming up the following year, did not wish to cause in the North Side a party split which might have unfavorable late repercussions.

Senator Einstein has been affiliated with the organization, being chairman of the Twenty-fifth Ward. But during the last special session he cast some votes which should have earned him the support of independents who are of the Pinchot persuasion, a strength which he has not always enjoyed in the past.

Publisher's Refusal Spikes Harmony Plan

Out of Washington County comes the definite statement that John L. Stewart, newspaper publisher, will not be a candidate for Congress.

Friends of Mr. Stewart are responsible for this clarification of his position.

It spikes a plan which was being tentatively considered by Republican organization leaders, designed to bring the independents and the regulars into a unity which might be employed not only for the benefit of Mr. Stewart, but for the re-election of State Senator Chauncey W. Parkinson.

Parkinson now has one of three courses, to run for the State Senate again, to run for Congress, as some of his friends have urged, or to retire from public life. He is represented as not in the humor to adopt the latter alternative.

If he is a candidate for the Senate he is certain to collide with D. Glenn Moore, associate editor of one of Mr. Stewart's newspapers.

Mr. Moore has served in the lower house of the Legislature, and during one session was the Pinchot floor leader, and chairman of the Committee on Elections. He has a record of friendliness to efforts to strengthen the election laws and toward social legislation.

On excellent authority it can be said that Mr. Moore already is a candidate, and, as he himself says, will stick until the "last vote is counted."

That word "counted," instead of "cast," is significant of conditions sometimes in Washington County as well as Allegheny. It indicates Mr. Moore knows his way about.

ABOLISH MANY JOBS, URGES ATTORNEY

Eicher Favors County Board, Manager Program

(A Greensburg attorney today expresses his views on governmental reforms needed for Pennsylvania. This is the thirty-seventh article of a series the Sun-Telegraph is publishing in its campaign to reduce taxes through elimination of waste and duplication in governmental agencies.)

A county manager plan of government similar to the one suggested as a model county government by a committee of the National Municipal League is advanced by Attorney C. Ward Eicher, of Greensburg. Attorney Eicher in a recent address urged four governmental reforms to bring about a more efficient local government and to help reduce taxes through elimination of waste and duplication.

Attorney Eicher's proposals were:

1—Create a county manager system. Do away with the Register of Wills, Recorder of Deeds, Clerk of Courts, Coroner, Poor Directors and other constitutional officers in county government. Let the Commissioners or a similar elected board appoint deputies to direct the work of the various offices.

2—Eliminate the minor judiciary system of justices of the peace and constables. In their place appoint qualified lawyers on a salary to act as quasi-judges. Give the appointed attorneys more jurisdiction in criminal cases and let them have jurisdiction in civil cases up to $500.

3—If we are to run our schools, let us run them. If Harrisburg is going to run them, let Harrisburg run them. The cost of our schools has mounted and mounted during the last few years. We need some definite change in operation of public schools.

4—Have the local governmental units adopt a pay-as-you-go policy and stop finding new ways to spend money. He declared the local governments should spend what they can afford and not spend and then look for money to pay the bill.

Attorney Eicher declared taxes on real estate have reached the saturation point, and saying:

"If we destroy the idea of people owning their own farms and homes, we have suffered a loss from which we will never recover."

The National Municipal League recommends that a county board of from five to nine members be elected. The board would appoint a county manager directly responsible to it for operation of all county departments. The league recommends that the county board be a policy-fixing body with the manager carrying out its wishes.

The league further recommends the concentration of activities in a few departments on the basis of functions.

City Officials Open New Democratic Club

Mayor McNair and other city officials attended the formal opening of the Fifth Ward Democratic Club's new headquarters at 639 Herron avenue, last night. The following officers were elected: Carl M. Trapp, president; J. B. O'Brien, vice president; Evelyn Lisander, secretary; David Brickley, treasurer, and George J. Maxwell, chairman of the board of directors.

War Enthusiasts Mightn't Like to Pose for Pictures

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Europe is busy figuring which way the cat will jump.

It has already taken a skip and a hop.

When it lands it is going to be spitting like Vesuvius, biting like carbolic acid and clawing like a drunken painter on a slanting roof.

Have you seen Floyd Gibbons' war pictures? How would you like to pose for the photographer?

They blame all this trouble on a peace treaty. Strange that a poultice should start rheumatism.

Will the Navy that took 'em over and brought 'em back go into competition for the passenger trade again?

It will start when the snow is gone. They don't care who they kill so long as nobody gets his feet wet.

BODY IN STATE AT BRUSSELS PALACE

Thousands View Remains of Loved Monarch

By ALBERT W. WILSON
Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 20.—The Belgians once more had their beloved King Albert I today.

He came to them in death, but once again they were permitted to gaze upon his face. His body lay in state in a small room on a wing of the second floor of the Grand Palace.

Thousands upon thousands passed in slow file beside the bier. It was the first time the citizens had seen their monarch since Saturday, the day he departed from Brussels on the mountain-climbing expedition that was to bring him death.

As the body lay on its black-shrouded resting place, the head was wrapped in a heavy bandage. The face was much paler than when I saw it Sunday only a few hours after the embalming. Only the face was exposed to view, for a Belgian flag entirely covered the body below the head.

Hundreds of women left the mortuary chamber weeping. There were delays in the passage of the long line of mourners.

I saw one disabled veteran stand at attention beside the bier. He faced his dead sovereign and snapped into a rigid salute. For more than a minute he held that salute and finally atendants had to urge him on.

From early morning came the line of people. They swung in a great arc on the grand concourse in front of the palace. They were patient. It was the first sunny day since the King's death and the warmth made the long delays more endurable to the crowd.

Police guided the lines outside the palace, but inside the task was taken over by plume-hatted royal guardsmen and red-coated footmen in knee breeches, all wearing black gloves and black bands on their arms.

VISITORS REGISTER

In the last room they entered, previous to entering the mortuary chamber, attendants were busy at two tables handing pens to passersby who hurriedly signed the register.

Many notables were allowed to pass through ahead of the general public.

The former Empress Zita of Austria was one of the first to bow before the body this morning.

Ambassador Dave Hennen Morris, of the United States, will lay a wreath there tomorrow on behalf of President Roosevelt, who has designated the ambassador to represent him at the funeral Thursday. The ambassador will be accompanied by his entire embassy staff.

Choice places for the funeral Thursday were being sold today at 100 francs each, but the price probably will be mony times greater before Thursday morning.

The body will be removed Thursday to the old cathedral of Saint Gudule for the funeral services. Burial will be in the royal crypt at Laeken.

The 32-year-old Crown Prince Leopold, who will become King Leopold III, Friday, walked behind the gun carriage which bore the body of his father along the three-mile route to the palace.

The Communists recently called upon workers to refuse to recognize the future King Leopold III, but other political factions failed to respond.

HOSTESS TO PRINCE HERE PRAISES NEW KING; GIRL VIOLINIST MOURNS

Quiet and Reserved Leopold Learned About Steel

Prince Leopold, who follows his father, King Albert, on the throne of Belgium, was recalled as a quiet, reserved, highly cultured youth by his hostess on a tour of the city when the Belgian royal family visited Pittsburgh 14 years ago.

Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., of 5225 Pembroke place, formerly Dorothy Babcock, daughter of former Mayor E. V. Babcock, and Mrs. Alan M. Scaife, formerly Sarah Mellon, explained the city's sights to the Prince, then 17 years old. They journeyed by automobile to the steel mills of Homestead and later to Forbes Field, where a reception for the King, Queen Elizabeth and the Prince was held.

The Prince appeared greatly interested in steel making methods here, Mrs. Fisher said. The Belgian plants had suffered heavily in the war and the Prince was eager to learn the latest methods for adoption in rebuilding the Belgian mills. She added:

"The Prince apparently was a trifle tired out by his constant traveling about and receptions. He was quiet but he spoke perfect English. He was an Oxford University young man."

Turnverein Will Mark 50th Year

The Allentown Turnverein, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in Western Pennsylvania, will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary next month. Observance ceremonies will be held on March 2 and 3.

MISS VIOLA MITCHELL . . . SHE PLAYED FOR KING ALBERT

Miss Mitchell's Debut Made Before Royal Family

A young Pittsburgh girl who has played the violin before most of the crowned heads of Europe today expressed her regret at the passing of Albert of Belgium.

She is Miss Viola Mitchell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Atley D. Mitchell, of 1137 Wightman street, who made her first appearance before the Belgian royal family in Brussels in 1928.

In Pittsburgh for a brief visit with her family, the attractive young artist will sail for England next week after completing arrangements in New York for an American concert tour. She is to appear in November with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A recital she was to give on March 6 at the Palais de Laeken, home of the royal family of Belgium, has been canceled due to the death of the monarch.

In the course of three years' residence in Brussels, where she studied, Miss Mitchell became well acquainted with the Belgian King and Queen and their children. Speaking of an occasion when Albert, an ardent lover of flowers, happily conducted her through the elaborate conservatory he maintained, she said:

"He was a charming gentleman, and ardently loved by all his people."

Postmaster Named For E. Pittsburgh

George V. Beech, member of the Legislature, was appointed postmaster of East Pittsburgh, according to word received from Washington. He is a son of Burgess James Beech.

FETE TO GUSKY HOME HEADS

Fifty young men and women who were raised in the J. M. Gusky Hebrew Orphanage and since have gone into the world as business and professional people will be among guests tonight at a testimonial dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Deutelbaum, superintendents of the home, at the Concordia Club.

Attorney Louis Caplan, president of the home, will preside. Speakers will include Dr. Ludwig B. Bernstein, executive director of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies; John H. Adams, principal of Perry High School; Rabbi B. Benedict Glazer, of Rodef Shalom Temple; A. L. Solomon, honorary president of the home; Mrs. Josiah Cohen, whose husband, the late Judge Josiah Cohen, was first president of the home; Leo Lehman, its treasurer; Aaron Schwartz, an "alumnus," and young Miss Melvina Perlberg. Rabbi B. A. Lichter, of B'Nai Israel Synagogue, will offer the invocation.

Leo Lehman is chairman in charge of arrangements.

3 Divorces Asked, 7 Decrees Given

Divorce suits have been filed by Jane White against Thomas M. White, Libbey Roth against Joseph Roth and by Michael Stankovics, Jr., against Mary Stankovics.

Divorces were granted to Margaret W. McCoy from William E. McCoy, Jennie M. Dawson from Milton L. Dawson, Oliver R. Sterner from Hazel B. Sterner, Marion B. Rowe from Harold I. Rowe, George Doemling from Catherine Doemling, Peter Clemons from Maude Clemons and to Loretta A. Glackin from Paul F. Glackin.

Etna Girl, 14, Sought To Balk Elopement

Police throughout the tri-state district, particularly Wellsburg, W. Va., were on the lookout today for a 14-year-old Etna girl and a youth who claimed to be a scion of Spanish nobility, to thwart their planned elopement.

The girl, Helen Crosby, of 16 Union street, vanished Saturday, according to her parents' story to county detectives. She and Ascencion Cacillus, 19, who lived across the street from the Crosby home, had planned to elope during Christmas holidays, but her parents foiled their plans, the detectives said.

After the couple's disappearance, the girl's parents found this written on the back of the youth's photograph:

"I'm going away with Sunshine. No use to look for us. We are on our way to Mexico, the land of sunshine, and will live in one of my sweetheart's castles. Goodbye and good luck to all."

"Sunshine" autographed the photograph with the words:

"Keep this in memory of one who loves you."

Senator's Son Wins Penn State Honor

Herman C. Brandt, son of State Senator Herman P. Brandt, is one of three Pittsburgh students active in extra-curricular work at Penn State College who have been recognized for scholastic attainments during the first semester. President of the Inter-Fraternity Council and of Lion's Paw, Brandt had an average of 2.1 out of a possible 3.

Others are John T. Ryan, president of the senior class and head of the men's student governing body, and J. Briggs Pruitt, president of the sophomore class and member of the boxing team. Manlio De Angelis, of Connellsville, president of the Penn State Club, made a 2.8 average.

Kaiser Lauds Albert As 'Noblest Enemy'

Universal Service.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, exiled in Doorn, Holland, praised King Albert of the Belgians as his "noblest enemy" when word of Albert's tragic death reached Doorn.

A source close to the Kaiser disclosed this today as the household of the former German Emperor in Doorn maintained silence, declaring Wilhelm would send no messages of sympathy to Queen Elizabeth because he has no relations with Belgium.

The former German Emperor, who ordered invasion of Belgium in 1914 after King Albert had flatly rejected the Kaiser's demand for unbarred passage for his armies, cried out when told of Albert's death:

"God of my fathers! What a glory he would have been for the Fatherland!

"Like any German prince, he did his duty, and fought with a sword like a man! He never descended to propaganda.

"He was the noblest of my enemies!"

WILL ROGERS SAYS

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Feb. 20.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

Glad they didn't start the Army fliers out on this route till morning, for it was a tough night. Was talking to Army pilots all the way across, and gee, they are just kids.

I preached and pleaded with 'em if it got tough to turn around and go back, or set her down in an emergency field, don't try to show how brave you are. Show how sensible you are. There is not a letter being written that's one-tenth as valuable as one of you kid's lives.

But they are just so keen to make good, well it kinder scares you. Mr. Roosevelt, I believe it would do great good if you would warn 'em, that you don't expect the service the level-headed, old experienced regulars delivered.

Col. Arnold, an old friend of mine, in charge of all of 'em in the West, told me in Salt Lake that he had been preaching that to 'em. I know you will like the way the regular mail pilots take it, (and most of them are ex-sore heads), they are fine men of fine judgment. Yours,

WILL.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Angina Pectoris Is Not a Hopeless Condition

I have been asked to write about angina pectoris, a form of heart disease. It is a painful and sometimes terrifying affliction. Unfortunately, many victims of this disorder fail to seek proper medical advice.

Dr. Copeland

The sufferer may believe his heart condition is incurable and so he refuses the necessary medical care. Then again, he may believe the attack to be indigestion. He treats himself with home medicines and fails to get the expert treatment so essential to his welfare.

With proper care the sufferer from angina pectoris need not regard himself as doomed. Even though the ailment is painful, it is not hopeless by any means.

The attacks come on suddenly. In most instances they can be traced to some physical or mental exertion. Such factors as worry, mental distress, anger and excitement, as well as mental and physical fatigue, are possible causes that must not be overlooked.

During an attack, the skin becomes grayish or very pale and a cold sweat appears upon the face. Though he does not groan or complain of pain, the victim remains motionless, silently suffering from severe and excruciating pain. Mild attacks last for a few minutes; others may last for a longer time.

After the attack subsides, the sufferer describes the pain as severe and agonizing, located over the region of the heart. The pain usually passes down the left arm. Occasionally, it may travel to the right shoulder and down the right arm. Nausea and vomiting sometimes accompany the pain.

The attacks can be controlled by the application of heat. If they are very severe the doctor may give nitroglycerin, morphine or other strong opiate. Failure to receive the proper medical attention is likely to result in greater pain and frequency of the attacks. Since the sufferer fears the attacks, his anxiety must be lessened in some manner. This may be by proper medication, or by teaching him how to live.

It was only within the past decade that hope was offered to victims of this disorder. In many instances, careful study of the health habits and activities of the patient, with the necessary changes and adjustments, lead to a decrease in the number of attacks. This happy result can only be accomplished by careful and repeated medical attention.

My advice to the sufferer from angina pectoris is to place himself in the hands of a competent physician. Follow his instructions and adhere strictly to his advice. Above all, avoid sudden physical exertion and mental strain. Practice the rule of moderation in all things.

GOOD COOKING SLOWS UP FOOD 'BOLTERS'

Wholesome Dishes Easily Prepared Well For All

Are there members of your family who insist on eating at top speed and then are tortured with indigestion? You've no doubt tried talk as to them, but have finally given up in despair. There just doesn't seem to be any way of making them see the matter in a sensible light.

Give up at once and try new food tactics. Serve them dishes they haven't eaten before. Foods you know they'll like, prepared in an especially attractive manner. The extra time spent in planning will be well worth the results, for the "gobblers" will quit running off while the rest of the family is only half way through the meal. They'll be anxious to know what's coming.

If you want suggestions, you can find them in Prudence Penny's little booklet published daily, or you can call Miss Penny herself [illegible] and get her personal help. The next time you want a buffet party or luncheon menu, she will be glad to suggest menus to you.

Join the group of co-operating Sun-Telegraph housewives by sending in your best recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Awards of a $5 prize and $1 prizes are given each day. No recipes are returned, due to the large number received.

GUINEA FRICASSEE

[illegible] Dish of Rewards.)

[illegible] cutlet, two and one-half to [illegible] pounds.
[illegible] tomatoes.
One can tomato soup.
One kernel of garlic.
One pound string beans or one can.
Two tablespoons flour.
One medium onion.
Two cups cold water.
Butter or beef dripnings.
Salt and pepper.

Place in baking pan two or three tablespoons butter. Salt and pepper veal cutlet and place it in making dish. Over this one can of tomatoes. Add garlic sliced [illegible] small pieces and distribute through the tomatoes. Then add one-half can of tomato soup and one cup of water. Place in a moderate oven at 375 degrees F. and bake until cooked, about one hour.

Prepare the string beans as follows: If fresh cut in small pieces and boil 10 minutes. Drain. Then fry the string beans with the sliced onion in butter for 10 minutes. Then push the onion and string beans to one side of the pan and in the liquid sauce add two tablespoons of flour. Keep the frying pan half off the flame, so that the flame is only under the flour. Stir the flour around until it is thoroughly browned, then add the other one-half can tomato soup and the cup of cold water. Mix all together, beans, onions, tomato soup, water and browned flour. When all is boiling remove pan from fire and add all to the meat and tomatoes in baking dish. Distribute around and allow to bake slowly in oven for another 30 minutes, when it will be ready to serve. Serves four.

MRS. FRANK S. MILLER,
1361 Oakhill street.

SAVORY BAKED BEANS
A Man's Dish
QUICK (For Home Baked Beans)

Two pounds marrowfat beans (large navy beans.)
One tablespoon salt.
Four tablespoons bacon or pork drippings.
One eighth (scant) teaspoon pepper.
One tablespoon minced onion.
Two level teaspoons dry mustard.
One-half cup molasses.
One-half to three-fourth pound thin sliced bacon.

Soak beans one hour. Put on to boil with drippings, salt, onion and pepper and boil till soft but not mushy—about two hours. (Marrowfat beans require less time than navy beans.) Drain but save bean stock.

Mix mustard with a tablespoon hot water add molasses. Mix well. Stir this mixture through beans carefully so as not to break skins.

Put in baking dish, cover top with bacon slices, cut in half, and bake in a medium oven for about one and one-half hours. Add a little bean stock if they become a little too dry.

Serve in baking dish. Bacon may be used if desired.

(Drippings may be omitted and several bacon slices added while cooking if you so elect.)

M. I. BRADFORD,
105 Dinsmore avenue, Crafton.

NOURISHING LENTEN DISH

Brown in a skillet: A generous tablespoon of butter, one teaspoon of fine cut onion, one tablespoon of chopped green pepper. To this add: One pint of cut mushrooms (either fresh or canned), one cup of water (if canned mushrooms are used, the liquid of it), one cup of tomato juice (optional). Cook until tender. Prepare separately, one cup of rice, then add it to the skillet mixture with one-half pound of grated sharp cheese. Cook for a few minutes, then place the entire ingredients in a baking dish and bake slowly until ready for use.

JENNIE McCHESNEY
436 Parker street, Verona.

JUNGLE SOUP.

One full cup of dry split peas.
Three pints of water.
One can of bouillon.
One can of tomato soup.
Salt and pepper to taste.

Place peas in a large saucepan without lid and add three pints of cold water. Bring to the boiling point. Allow to simmer until the water cooks down and the peas are cooked to a soft, wet paste. Be careful not to let them burn. I find an aluminum pot best, as the peas are less likely to stick and burn. Then add the two cans of soup, stir and allow to simmer for a few minutes. Season to taste, if necessary, as the canned are salted. If the soup is thicker than you prefer, just add a little water. If you do not have time to prepare the soup using the dry split peas, add one-half can of water to two cans of green pea soup. Bring to a boil. Then stir in the bouillon and tomato soup, seasoning if necessary. The other method will give you a better soup, however.

Here's Quickest, Simplest Way to Stop a Cold

1. Take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours
3. If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of water and gargle according to directions in box.

Almost Instant Relief in this Way

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way to treat a cold. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. POSLAM

The Best GRAY HAIR [illegible]

You can [illegible] at home a better gray hair remedy for a few cents, by following this simple recipe. To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and rolls years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair now when it is so economical and easy to get rid of it in your own home.

Don't take calomel!

HERE'S NEW HEALTH FOR YOUR LIVER

Now banish bad breath, pimples, constipation; feel like a million!

That tired, frowsy feeling in the morning, that "dark-brown taste" in the mouth—if you would banish them and win back buoyant health, don't expect relief from salts, mineral oil, or candy and chewing-gum laxatives.

For such remedies only move the bowels. While chances are, you're one of the thousands suffering from sluggish liver, which does not yield sufficient bile — causing pimples, blemishes, headaches, bad breath and a general run-down feeling.

What you need is something which acts thoroughly but harmlessly upon the liver. And in Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets you will find that "something," which stimulates the bile flow.

A successful substitute for calomel, these famous tablets are compounded of pure vegetable ingredients, and have been prized for years by millions.

To get and keep the bile flowing freely—correcting constipation, skin troubles, and win back that "fine-and-dandy" feeling of youth, go to your druggist for Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets today. 15c, 30c, 60c.

DO YOU SMOKE?

Do you use Electricity?

Generally speaking, most people do smoke now-a-days . . . and nearly everybody uses electricity . . . but they use it so casually that they don't give the thought to it they do to enjoying their favorite cigarette. Yet stopping to consider the comparative enjoyment which each one offers for the amount of money spent—even those of you who don't smoke can appreciate the comparison! To the average smoker, a pack of cigarettes a day doesn't seem excessive. If he smokes one of the more popular brands, now selling at two packs for a quarter, that would be $3.75 a month for cigarettes. The average monthly residential electric bill is much less than that . . . to be specific, it was $2.82 during 1933. Now there's no denying the pleasure of a cigarette or cigar to the seasoned smoker . . . he wouldn't give them up for anything . . . and would deny himself many things first—but one of those, if he stops to think, would certainly not be electricity. It's too much a part of daily life, the enjoyment of his home and family . . . furthermore it costs so little.

PRESIDENT OF CZECHS UNAFRAID OF GERMAN PERIL

Masaryk Confident Despite Potential War Peril

Pan-Germanism of Hitler than any other state.

For they read in Hitler's "My Battle," that "Today we Germans number eighty millions in Europe," and that the sixty-five million in Germany must be united with the others, and that within "scarcely a hundred years 250,000,000 Germans will live on this continent, and not jammed together like coolies."

Then they look at the population of Czechoslovakia, scarcely fourteen million, and of them three million Germans. Already the German part of Czechoslovakia has demanded secession and union with Germany so vociferously that the Nazi party was dissolved by edict.

HUNGARIAN MENACE

But the Czechs look again at the map. Their 54,000 square miles are stretched out in such an unhappy fashion that motorized German and Hungarian troops within four hours could join in the middle of Czechosolvakia and divide the nation in two. The Czechs claim they have only 119,000 Hungarian minority citizens but Hungary claims there are more than a million, and the Hungarians are if anything more eager than the Germans for "territorial revision."

If Austria went Nazi, Czechoslovakia would be almost completely encircled by enemies, and worst of all, would be cut off from any near access to Jugoslavia, the only member of the little Entente whose army is strong enough to do her ally any good.

It is a black prospect for this youthful state in the sixteenth year of its life. President Masaryk sees all the shadows. But he also sees lights.

Five drawing rooms precede the reception room of the president in the magnificent old castle of Prague. In the year before Masaryk was born the cannons of the castle bombarded the city of Prague to crush a revolt of Czech patriots against the Hapsburgs. Today the white-haired master of the castle has no air of triumph about him. He looks the part of a philosopher contemplating the prospects of war from the height of eighty-four years.

HITLER FACES TEST

He explained, speaking in slow, correct English:

"Don't forget that Hitler's government is only one year old. One cannot tell how it will develop. It took the Good Lord six days to create Heaven and earth. He was omnipotent. He could have done it in a second. But He needed six days to do it in and when he finished he was tired and had to take a rest on the seventh day.

"How can you expect Hitler to do better? Germany with its sixty-five-million people is the biggest nation in Europe next to Russia. To reorganize it in the thorough-going way Hitler is attempting is a gigantic task and it cannot be done overnight. It cannot be done in a year, and when it is done it may look quite different. Those sixty-five million people have brains. We will just wait and see how their brains work. The Germans are essentially all professors. That means they will think. They couldn't live without thinking and that will have results."

DR. THOMAS G. MASARYK . . . CZECHO-SLOVAKIA'S PRESIDENT

That was one of the optimistic notes. He continued:

"But Hitler is only a continuation of a movement that began away back in the last century when the Pan-Germans first arose in Austria. His program, to unite all the German speaking peoples of Europe into one vast German empire, is one of the oldest conceptions of modern politics. You Americans know so little about Europe that you easily forget the historical background. Friends of mine from America come here to me and talk about Hitler and show such apprehension. But I have watched this thing developing too many decades to be alarmed.

"All these decades, it is true, Pan-Germanism was only a movement. Now that movement is embodied in the German state, and the whole movement, as the German state today, is based on the concept that the Germans are a herrenvolk,—a race of rulers. It is a serious matter if sixty-five million people are led in that direction."

BECOMES MORE STERN

An ironic gleam came in the President's eyes. Then his voice grew harder.

"They say 'France rules Europe now—but we shall rule Europe.' They speak of needing land, of needing territory, but what does that mean? Is there any land, any territory in Europe that is not already inhabited? They speak of pushing toward the East? But what does that mean? Poland and Russia? They speak of colonies? But what does that mean? Africa? And if so, what does it mean to the states that have their colonies there?

"You see, the Germans are a serious problem for the whole of Europe. But there is nothing we can do better than to watch and study it. You should see my library on Hitlerism. And in studying the German revolution one must not be led astray by the phenomena that accompany its violent days. In every revolution people get excited and senseless actions are performed. Were there not plenty of such actions in the French Revolution, in the American Revolution? The Hitler Revolution is a genuinely great revolution."

The President sighed.

"But now, when one looks the matter over, one can take some consolation from one thing: Hitler has twice proclaimed that he gives up Alsace-Lorraine. Is he to be believed? Well, he has proclaimed it twice! So what remains for him to quarrel about with France? The Saar? It can be settled, of course—the Treaty of Versailles! I am not one who believes that treaties are made to be broken.

TRIED AND LOST

"It is true that the Germans once went through Belgium and made a scrap of paper of the treaty guaranteeing neutrality. Holland and Belgium principally Antwerp, were the object of Pan-German wishes. It is true that that was part of the Pan-German program. They tried it and lost.' That ought to be sufficient answer."

I asked:

"What effect has the rise of Hitler to power had on the internal politics of Czechoslovakia?"

"The German National Socialist party here wanted to take part of our territory from us and give it to Germany. Well, we dissolved them. Democracy does not mean that one must let any ruffian that comes along deliver a slap and go unpunished. Democracy must strike back. Didn't your American democracy fight against the split of the South? Democracy may in a critical period have to fight. But just because it is assailed does not mean that it is defeated or is going to be defeated."

But war? I asked.

The President replied slowly:

"I do not believe war is coming. The will to make war may be somewhere. I know that some people are bellicose, but where is the money to make war? Every country in the world has hungry people, how can any country feed an army to make war?

"But was Europe then, so rich in 1914?"

"Much richer than now, of course. Look at the value of money, how it has declined. Look at your own dollar.

"Yes, I know that some people are bellicose, but they've no money, and that's a strong argument against war."

The President's argument sounded more like a hope than an opinion. The real hope of Czechoslovakia lies in her treaties, lies in her firm belief that the problems raised by Hitler are problems for all of Europe, and that neither France nor England can afford to let the little states go under. The President realizes this. He concluded:

"We are doing our best to bring all the friends of peace together. We must be prepared; not only our army. We are prepared in our convictions, and that is the most important thing. And our conviction is: Peace!"

Whose Fault?

When Little Girls Show Temper

A quarrelsome child is a sick child, mothers! A bad bowel condition means bad behavior. And it doesn't help matters to give bilious boys and girls some powerful cathartic that upsets them for days. When you see a coated tongue, dull or yellowed eyes, or other signs of sluggishness, there's always a way to cleanse and sweeten that little system without violence; next day you have a happy, contented child. This common-sense treatment is explained on the right:

Good health and good behavior go hand in hand. With inner health, come smiling faces and sunny dispositions. And it's really so simple a matter to keep children's bowels regular. The only "medicine" most youngsters ever need to promote thorough bowel action is pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fine, fruity laxative never weakens them, or takes away their appetite. But get real California Syrup of Figs; you can get it anywhere; it isn't expensive.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

The Pittsburgh Junior League does not have a guilty conscience and therefore its members are merely interested in the recent criticism of certain Junior Leagues not named, made by the founder of the Junior League, Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsay, of New York.

Mrs. Rumsay at a recent press conference of Mrs. Roosevelt's, was quoted by the Washington Times as saying:

"They (certain Junior Leagues) are building big expensive club houses where they can go and swim, and are forgetting all about the original idea of helpfulness. I think it is a pernicious tendency and should be checked."

I don't see how the criticism could possibly apply to the Pittsburgh Junior League," remarked Miss Mary Carroll, publicity chairman of the Pittsburgh League.

And this writer doesn't either.

League Here Has Modest Headquarters

In the first place, the Pittsburgh Junior League doesn't have a clubhouse. It does have headquarters, one large room on the mezzanine of the Clark Building, which has been divided into an L-shaped room, which serves as meeting place and art gallery, and into a small luncheon room.

And these headquarters are so gayly furnished — what with charming chintz slip-covers and draperies and simple chairs and sofas—that they serve as a marvelous lesson, by the way, to brides-to-be in making a home attractive on little money. For the rich are poorer nowadays, and most of the girls marrying now have to manage on less on setting up housekeeping than did their older sisters.

In addition to having modest, but attractive headquarters, the Pittsburgh Junior Leaguers have to do their swimming and the like elsewhere.

And most important of all, everything the Junior League does or sponsors is either for the benefit of some needy and deserving philanthropy, or aimed to supply suitable entertainment for children or to stimulate an interest in art.

Plays for Children Given Without Fee

The Junior League gives marionette plays for children in the public school, free of charge, and the same plays for an admission fee, too, raising funds for the free performances.

Its series of art exhibits, never more interesting or more varied than this year, helps stimulate interest and appreciation in art, and helps artists, too.

It has supported a nutrition clinic. And its members are volunteer workers in many of the city's hospitals. One of its most interesting ways of raising funds for its philanthropic work is by selling rummage contributed by members and friends at the Junior League Thrift Shop, Penn avenue. And members again help serve in the shop to reduce overhead.

And the parties the Junior League sponsored, or helped sponsor—from the successful President's ball to the soiree charettes so popular a year ago—are all benefits.

The President's ball was for the benefit of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation. The soiree charettes, as another example of the Junior League's work, helped architects who've had a difficult time in this depression when people have been more concerned with clinging to their homes rather than with planning new ones.

Century Club Told What Money Is

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

"What Is Money?" Henry Pratt Fairchild's interrogative subject was answered by the speaker at the Twentieth Century Club yesterday with a negative statement —it is not the stable, reliable, dependable thing it was once thought to be. As an approach to his subject, Prof. Fairchild sketched the beginnings of exchange in "words of one syllable" as requested by the lecture chairman, Mrs. David Wilson Kuhn.

Money is the outgrowth of trade and trade is the outgrowth of the division of labor, Prof. Fairchild said. The first instrument of capitalism was a stone hammer, he went on, defining capital as "an accumulation of objects designed to promote wealth rather than to satisfy the immediate needs of a human being.

Desirability, durability, divisability and portability are the four necessary elements in any exchange medium, he said. Explaining that all of the mediums in early society lacked one or more of these essentials, he said both silver and gold have been wanted from time immemorial for display and decoration and that gold has always been preferred because "it kept its shine."

In his analysis of the function of money, the speaker listed it first as a medium of exchange, then as a measure of value; as a basis for comparing diverse commodities, as a means of keeping the accumulation of past efforts and as a basis for deferred payment. Since value is not a material, but a psychological thing it is the personal, internal appraisal of things that gives them their value and that cannot be measured, he observed.

The function of gold as money has far outstripped its function as a commodity. The place has been reached where a monetary system that is "as good as gold" is not good enough. Sound currency was defined as that in which the unit will at all times gives an identical command over all commodities and a stable currency is that which will always get the same value as nearly as can be measured.

Miss Catherine Mahoney's Engagement Made Known

At a bridge party on Wednesday given by Miss Leona M. Lafferty, of Berringer place, Ben Avon, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Catherine Elizabeth Mahoney, daughter of M. Edward Mahoney, of Eleanor street, to John W. Kennady II, of Landenburg, Pa.

Miss Mahoney and Mr. Kennady are both graduates of Pennsylvania State College, where she was a Gamma Phi Beta and her fiance a member of Alpha Zeta fraternity and of Pi Delta Epsilon honorary journalism fraternity.

An early spring wedding will terminate the betrothal.

New Future Home Plans Benefit Music Festival

Crafton P. T. A. Will Honor Founder Tonight

Founder's Day will be observed by the Crafton Parent-Teacher Association at its February meeting in the Crafton High School this evening. The program will be presented by high school pupils. Two plays, "Elmer" and "Thanks Awfully" will be given under the direction of Miss Mary Kate Ford. Miss Sigrid Gayvert has arranged for a musical program by a selected girls' chorus.

The Ingomar Parent-Teacher Association, meeting at the school Friday afternoon, will be addressed by Mrs. Bernice Gregory on "The History of the P.-T. A." Mrs. R. K. Millard, pianist, will furnish the opening music and Mrs. Harry Trimble will sing.

Pitt Women's Association To Hear Dr. Schoenberger

The readers' group of the Women's Association of the University of Pittsburgh will meet tomorrow in the old College Club to hear Dr. Harold W. Schoenberger, of the university, compare magazines for women 80 years ago with those of today. Alice Tisdale Hobart's book, "Oil for the Lamps of China," will be reviewed by Mrs. Carr Eubank, who lived in Nanking for a number of years.

Council to Hear British Woman Labor Leader

Miss Jennie Lee, vivacious Scotch lass, former member of Parliament and British left-wing Labor leader, will address Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women, at its monthly meeting on Tuesday, February 27, in the Y. M. & W. H. A.

Miss Lee, daughter of a Welsh miner, began her speaking career as a girl of 15, when she addressed meetings from orange boxes and coal carts. Since that time she has been active in the Independent Labor party and in the labor movement at home and abroad.

When in 1929 she was elected to Parliament from North Lanark in Scotland, she was only 24, the youngest member of the House. Though young, she was a prominent member, and was known as one of the most forceful and effective debaters for legislation favorable to workers. Her record includes activity in the interest of unemployed women, housing reform, and improvement of conditions among coal miners.

The recreation bureau of Pittsburgh Section will present the sixth in its series of entertainments for settlements and community centers on Thursday evening in the McKelvey School, Herron Hill, with members of the Hill District Community Council as guests.

The program will include songs by Caroline Hilmer, contralto; song and dance by her small daughter, Sandra; piano solos and accompaniments by Jeannette Weinthal; a Hillbilly act, song and dance numbers by Corrine Lenchner and Florence Finesilver, and magic by William Beatty.

Members of the board of managers of the United Presbyterian Home for the Aged, Wilkinsburg, will be at home to their friends on the annual reception and donation day, Thursday, from 2 until 5 o'clock.

Miss Sara G. Linton and Miss Gretchen Emsheimer will present a program of Oriental music and an Oriental exhibit and tea will be other features, Mrs. Manuel C. Elmer and Mrs. J. K. Miller presiding at the table.

Sheraden Players To Give 'Distant Drums'

The Sheraden Players will present "Distant Drums" in the Langley High School Thursday and Friday evenings.

Catholic Women To Hear Talk On Russia

Wednesday evening, February 28 at the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women's Council House will be given over to motion pictures and a lecture on Soviet Russia, by Frank J. Wood. The pictures were made by Mr. Wood during a visit in Russia.

The directors of the council has chosen April 24 as the date for their annual spring card party and luncheon to be held at Council House. Mrs. William P. Lange has accepted the chairmanship.

Ramblers to Hold Dance at Tent Club

The Ramblers Club will hold a cabaret dance in the Tent Club, Duquesne Gardens, tomorrow evening. Miss Edna Hammer and Walter Donath are assisting the chairman, W. S. Cunningham.

Little puppeteers, what now? Why don't you know? . . . it's a whole marionette show which one of the stores is putting on in their windows! A show straight from New York . . . and might we add, one which tied up traffic on Fifth avenue when it was there.

It's sponsored by one of the most internationally famous cosmeticians there is . . . a window-ful of marionettes going through the "daily dozen" which you women are advised to use as your way to skin beauty. You'll see dollies creaming their faces . . . putting on eye shadow . . . massaging . . . exercising . . . and all the rest of it. A really remarkable sight for any woman! It will help you to realize how simple the "art" of facial loveliness can be. Naturally, all the cosmetics and creams may be purchased in the store!

Snub up your waistline! Trim in your tummy! And put up the bars on this business of thickening thighs! One of the stores is having a clearance of better girdles, girdlieres, and scanties! Just the sort of garments you'd like to be able to "pick up" for teensy sums! And now they're one-third off (regular $3.50 to $5).

Styles include side-hook girdles . . . side-lace girdles . . . stepin girdles . . . side-hook and semi-stepin girdlieres with 2-way-stretch lastex backs . . . and dainty scanties with frothy bits of lace. Mostly all peach color . . . a few white. Broken sizes . . . but a wonderful buy for you who can find your size there. Not many left . . . and this means HURRY UP!

Now listen, my children, and you shall hear . . . this modern fairy tale about the shop which shampoos your assorted wigs with nothing less than SOFT water!

Everyone knows that rain water is the softest, best water for shampooing—if it were possible to get it! But who's going to sit 'round with a tub waiting for the rain? Especially with a beauty shop like this which owns a soft water tank and uses this exclusively for shampooing . . . this, and genuine Castile soap! Couple this up with the fact that a shampoo and finger-wave combined will cost you only 50c NOW . . . AND you'll have a super-bargain.

Really . . . this daybed we've seen rates more of a title than "daybed." Because it would be such a knockout for the young girl's room . . . or the college girl's, for that matter.

The antique white finish is touched with gold . . . very much Louis XV in period . . . the kind of furniture which calls for dainty drapes and colorings beloved of every feminine heart. And there are pieces to match up with it in case you want the whole suite . . . vanity tables with little chests . . . all priced so moderately for anything of this kind that we felt the urge to throw out every piece we owned and begin all over (would that we could!) The bed is $23.

Presumably many of you are more or less cloistered these days of Lent . . . but for those whose Lent-ing is a little flexible, we want to mention brand new dinner dresses which have sneaked Spring into our heart under cover of the wintry days!

For such as this brown, green, buff and white print at $12.95 we never saw before! A beautiful quality crepe with little ties of ruffles going ripple-ripple down the back . . . very Vere de Vere. And lots of those blacks and whites (black with lingerie touches, organdie, etc.) . . . not to mention the black with pink which is THE thing for Spring. And a pink cotton lace prize which we would say had been MADE for week-ending and such, when a non-wrinkler is the mainstay of the suitcase! Just prepare to feast your eyes . . . to cheer your clothes-loving soul . . . and still keep your budget in a good humor! See these!

More Names Added to List Of Pioneer Women

We're running up on our PIONEER WOMEN of PITTSBURGH.

The old-time sisters who forged ahead were a goodly gathering. And when the home bodies were doing their washing with elbow grease and when the in-a-door stitching was done by the first intricate sewing machines,

I'm more than glad to have a chance to mention them. I am glad women with better memories than mine are adding new names to the growing list.

Those were the days when Helen Wills was having her racket (racquet) in the nursery. When Gertrude Ederle hadn't considered herself equal to the English Channel. When Amelia Earhart wasn't looked upon as our embassadoress of the air.

There were other things on women's minds beside outdoor sports. They had to clear the way for what was called "movements." The ballot. The W. C. T. U. The rainy-day skirt—these were all more vital than strong right arms, various fin strokes and having a good spirit level.

"Bedelia" was being sung on the upright piano. "My Wife's Gone to the Country" was giving the husband of this locality his first big chance. "Good-by, My Lover, Good-by" was still popular in the hamlet.

Someone asks me if I recall the market forum here in Pittsburgh. And William Jennings Bryan, the "silver-tongued orator" putting vim and vigor into the cause dear to the women. No, I don't remember that. But maybe it is one of the big reasons his daughter has carried the first female portfolio over into Denmark.

Dear Miss Brunot:

Your reminder in the Sun-Telegraph of women who were pioneers in eulogizing the scope of women, and in the bringing about of equal suffrage recalled to me many pleasant persons.

I smile now when I remember how disturbed the conservative suffragists were over Dr. Mary Walker, lest she might bring discredit upon their "cause" by her spectacular actions.

OTHER NAMES

There was a Mrs. William Hoase here in Pittsburgh. She was a gentlewoman who might be added to your list of pioneers and she was an ardent worker in the advancement of clubs. Then Miss Mary Morehead, daughter of a distinguished father, stepped out fearlessly in many, many ways for women. Mrs. Robert D. Coard came in later, dominating in progressive movements in women's work.

Oh, yes, there was Nellie Bly in that army of progressives. She was a Pittsburgher. And a Miss Adelaide Nevin. And Bessie Bramble, an early newspaper writer. Mrs. Charles I. Wade was her name to those who knew her as a private citizen. Miss Meskimmons and Miss Sarah Killikelly were two others. All these were Pittsburgh women who were unafraid.

Thank you for your article recalling to my mind so many who were fearless.

Sincerely yours,
JAN HERN.

"Jan Hern." You can't hide your glorious light under a bushel. You are Mrs. A. W. Smith, Jr., and you wrote under that pseudonym, Jan Hern, when the lights were low where women walked. You were a young pioneer with a little girl figure and a voice that was modified in tone but sizzling in the eminating of mind . . .

Thank you, Jan Hern, for anyone who has any reading memory knows who Nellie Bly was. Her book on her trip around the world was bought by eager thousands. Men and women crowded to the newspaper bulletins for reports of her in various countries. How many days was it that it took her to encircle the globe? She was far ahead of Magellan. And far behind the present day airmen. But how long was it?

POPULAR WOMAN

Everybody wore Nellie Bly caps. Nellie's name was as popular as any woman's name in print today.

I heard Sarah Killikelly in the old Fifth Avenue Kindergarten College. Mrs. J. I. Buchanan was president of that organization then. Miss Killikelly was little and talked well on Don Quixote.

A reader wants to know if I recall the hot summer day we met at the home of Mrs. J. O. Miller to march in protest against not getting the ballot, to Schenley Oval. You have erred slightly. It was the home of Julian Kennedy, who was Mrs. Miller's father. Newspaper women and women artists each had a division. In the one was Gertrude Gordon, Louise Landis, May Stranathan and Florence Estelle Little. The latter was worried. For she was both a writer and an artist, and scarcely knew where to place herself. Among the artists were Anna Belle Craig, Mary McAuley Carroll and others. Does anybody remember who they were?

It was a great day for the chiropodist, for we stood for hours listening to men speaking and to the band playing, and we passed our weight from one foot to the other. But kept our banners up.

Hats faded in that hot sun. But they would be faded now, anyway.

Fay King Thinks Smiles Help Make Marriage a Success

By FAY KING

The most delightful thing about young persons is their gaiety. The young men need not be the handsomest or the girls the most beautiful. The fact that they enjoy each other's company and meet with smiles and part with smiles, makes them all seem attractive and charming.

But so often when these same young persons marry, they begin suddenly to assume such a dignity. Perhaps they wish to impress all who see them with the fact that they are no longer courting, but have settled down and taken up the real responsibilities of life.

But why shouldn't they go on smiling gaily, and being just as bright and fascinating as they had been?

Dignity overdone is a bit deadly!

Keep your courtship smiles!

Philip Veritzen Reveals His Knowledge About Avis

As I walked away upon Philip Veritzen's arm from the little group centered around Avis Arlen, it seemed to me as if I could feel the girl's eyes and those of her mother boring into my back. But I was no longer concerned about either Avis or her mother. The meeting between her and the newly-wedded pair, which I had tried to prevent but which Mary herself had engineered, was over and, I told myself whimsically, there had been no casualties, I was quite sure that under the eyes of the assembled wedding guests, and especially conscious of the vigilance of the Underwoods, she would make no further attempt to upset things—at the present time. I held no brief for what she might attempt in the future.

But Philip Veritzen was, as Katie would say, "somethings else again." What did he wish to say to me that he should thus single me out for "escort to the coffee urn?"

He said nothing until we were well out of earshot of the little group that I felt were staring after us. When he did speak his voice was almost an inaudible murmur.

"Congratulations, my dear lady. You are as clever as you are beautiful. That trick is worthy of a Machiavelli."

KNOWS ABOUT AVIS

"What trick?" I asked him in pretended astonishment, and, indeed, I did not know exactly what his reference meant, although I suspected something of what he was trying to tell me.

"You know perfectly well," he retorted, "but I am going to give myself the pleasure of telling you, nevertheless. The trick I am admiring is that by which you managed to tame Miss Avis, who, if I am any judge, has been behaving in the manner of a leopard escaping from a zoo."

I caught back a panic-stricken exclamation. How had he managed to discover the things which we had tried so hard to keep hidden?

"'Elementary, my dear Watson,'" he smiled. "When Avis, at the very last minute, told her mother and me of the change in plans for the wedding processional, I knew that the flimsy excuse she offered, of disliking the color scheme and refusing to give up her green and silver gown, was not the real reason for the change. I thereupon set my wits to work to discover the identity of the colored gentleman lurking in the woodpile, and I think, after due consideration, I have him located."

He smiled down at me benevolently and, not for the first time, I felt as if I were a mouse under the paws of a cat. But I meant to parry his questions as long as I could, and my comment upon his boast was the single word, "Yes?" with a slight upward inflection.

"Suppose I check off the items in regular order," he said. "First, I know, of course, that Avis had come down here in the full expectation of being a bridesmaid. It was my especial request, as you may remember."

ONE CONCLUSION

"Oh, yes," I said hastily, wondering if it were only my fancy, or was there a thread of menace in the silken warp of his words.

"Under those circumstances, I did not think that either Noel or Mary would raise any objections to the plan."

"Nor did they," I interposed hastily, if mendaciously.

He nodded, whether in assent or with incredulity I could not tell, and went on:

"So there was but one conclusion left for me to draw. Avis must have behaved so atrociously that Noel and Mary balked at her entering the processional."

He paused and looked down at me compellingly, but I meant to avoid that particular trap if possible.

"Even if your conclusions were correct, which, remember, I have not endorsed in any way, would you expect me to admit its truth?"

We stopped for an instant, in our leisurely progress toward the buffet, and he looked down at me with an intent gaze that seemed to reach to the inmost recesses of my thoughts.

"You already have admitted it," he said quietly. "Further words of any sort would mean nothing to me. And—I shall know how to deal with the situation. Do not fear! Will you permit me?"

He drew out the chair behind the coffee urn, seated me in it, bowed impressively, and made his way back to Mrs. Arlen, Avis and the Underwoods.

FLOWERY SPRING NEGLIGEES

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NOT all the negligees and hostess gowns are utterly sophisticated garments in which one could entertain the intimate dinner party. There are a good many frilly, feminine distinctly boudoir models coming into the picture, good news in these days when even the busiest business girl has some patriotic leisure to use as she likes.

THE pompadour effect illustrated above is such a negligee.

The other one, despite its princess lines and general air of luxury, is every inch washable, and it might be pressed into hostess duty as well as boudoir rites.

The charming negligee at the left is truly Watteau in effect, although fin ruffles are used in a 1934 manner instead of puffy panniers. It is powder blue flat crepe, with bodice, sleeves and ruffles of pink and blue flowered crepe. At the right is a soignee model in the new summer-thin washable velvet. It is daffodil, with rich yoke appliques and sleeves of dark Alencon lace.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Too Much Help

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Was it correct for a young lady to assist a young man in putting on his coat? The young man is four years her senior. This was done in the young lady's home, with no one present but her parents. D.

No, this isn't correct, unless the man is crippled and it is obvious that he would appreciate being helped. But under the usual circumstances men don't like to have girls help them with their coats, and they don't like to have girls hold their hats in a theater.

Tines Down?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I always understood that the tines of a fork were placed up on the plate when one has finished eating a meal. I recently read in the paper that the tines were placed down. This last method seems to me very awkward. Please explain this to me. C.

The usual custom is to place the fork on the plate with the tines up, but many people prefer the foreign custom of placing the fork with the tines turned down. Either is correct.

Household Hints

Add a little vinegar to the water in which you rinse your silk stockings. This will make them practically run-proof.

Leftover toast may be rolled and used for coating croquettes or for sprinkling over the tops of escalloped mixtures. It may be crumbled or cut into small pieces and used in puddings, meat or fish loaves. Another way to use it is to cut it into small cubes or strips, reheat to freshen it, and then serve with soups, appetizers or salads.

For the housewife who weighs her food purchases, government food experts have issued the following guide: one dozen eggs of medium size weighs about one and a half pounds; for bread baked at home allow one pound of flour for one and a half pounds of bread; one pound dried fruit corresponds to about four or five pounds of fresh fruit.

Contract Bridge

:-: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Placing Trump Strength

Strong Bridge players realize that there is usually one drawback to a Penalty Double based on trump strength in that it aids the Declarer in locating outstanding trumps and thus perhaps reducing the number of tricks to be lost in that suit. However, when a vulnerable partner has made an Overcall at the range of three and a player holds three apparently sure trump tricks, he cannot be blamed for assuming that he can defeat a game contract, and even though his gain is only 50 points, he may feel that he must double in self-defense to keep non-vulnerable opponents from bidding too high.

Perhaps it was some such motive as that which tempted East in the hand below to make a Penalty Double of an adverse game contract, and I imagine that before the Opening lead was made and the Dummy spread on the table, he was rather grateful to North for the Redouble.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ K Q 7 6 3 ♡ — ◇ A K Q 7 4 ♣ 9 7 2
♠ — ♡ A K 8 2 ◇ J 6 5 ♣ K Q J 10 8 4	North / West East / South	♠ A J 10 8 ♡ Q 10 9 7 6 ◇ 10 8 3 ♣ 6
	♠ 9 5 4 2 ♡ J 5 4 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ A 5 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠ (1)	Pass	2 ♠ (2)	3 ♣ (3)
4 ♠ (4)	Double (5)	Pass	Pass
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—With a two-suited hand, of course, North shows the higher ranking suit first.

2—With four trumps, an Ace and a doubleton, South must keep the bidding open.

3—Even with a passing partner, West is justified in this vulnerable Overcall. Apparently, if played at clubs, he can take seven tricks in his own hand and even if his partner's hand would produce one, the honors would counterbalance in large measure any penalty.

4—In view of partner's support and West's Overcall, North now decides not to show his second suit. The Raise has assured him of adequate trump support in spades and a diamond bid now, he feels, might assist the defense.

5—East feels fairly well assured of three trump tricks. He counts on his partner for at least enough tricks to defeat the contract.

East's natural Opening was the singleton club, which was won in Dummy with the Ace. North, applying the Law of Symmetry and drawing a correct inference from West's vulnerable Overcall and East's Double, decided that all four adverse trumps were in the East hand. He therefore followed the first trick with the lead of four rounds of diamonds, on the third round discarding one of Dummy's remaining clubs. This play assured the fulfillment of the contract as East was entirely helpless. To ruff with the eight would permit an over-ruff by the nine; and the return of a heart, which the closed hand would trump, would permit the lead of the fifth diamond and the discard of Dummy's last club. To ruff with a higher trump would permit the discard of the last club. Regardless of the line of defense East adopted he was limited to the winning of three tricks—namely, his winning trumps.

As a result of the Redouble, North was the winner by 360 points. Even had East succeeded in beating the contract one trick, the partnership would have been only 50 points better off than they would if they had defeated it undoubled, and it is quite probable that without the Double North would have found such an accurate method of playing the hand.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

No getting away from it, the best dressed women wear the simplest gowns. That "all dressed up" look is ruinous to chic and smartness. The beautiful, graceful silhouette is best displayed in frocks that carry almost no ornamentation. Many a girl looks prettier in plain skirt and shirtwaist than in an evening gown that is fussy. As for the heavyweights, ruffles and fashion gadgets add to the bulky appearance. Line and color are important details to keep in mind. Richness of fabric is heavenly, but wrong lines and poor choice of color rob it of its charm.

Those ultra-modern femmes who must be different or die in their tracks find numerous ways of making a coiffure sensation. Lacquered wigs are worn. They have been revived of late. Suitable only for the fresh, young beauteous face, since the flat glisteny surface of the top-piece is not flattering. Bobbed white wigs are fascinating and, for those quaint, naive Edwardian duds, they are precisely the right note. Then there is painted hair. The water wave is dried, combed out, the glory-crest sprinkled with a powder to match the gown, and a fixative applied.

JOHN M'GRAW AND WIFE ON HAVANA VACATION, ANNUAL AFFAIR

One of baseball's most colorful figures—John J. McGraw—is reported seriously ill in a New York hospital. He is suffering from uremia and has been sinking for a few days. Doctors give him a 50-50 chance to live. He is only 60 years old, and until several years ago was a vigorous, hard-fighting leader in baseball. Then he gradually withdrew from the scene, retiring from the coaching lines to the bench and then giving up his uniform for civilian clothes. Finally, season before last, he relinquished the management of the Giants, in last place at the time, to young Bill Terry, star first baseman, who drove them to the pennant and world championship last year, his first full season at the helm. McGraw had managed the Giants from the middle of the 1902 campaign, going to the New York club as manager from the famous Baltimore Orioles, a great aggregation, of which he was an outstanding member, a star infielder. These are International News Photograph Service and Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph pictures.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Major Leaguers in 40's.
Pennock Joins Colony.
New Ball Pleases Rabbit.
Ancient Feud Revived.
Ring Ban On Hamas, Jr.
Hockey-Grid Comparison.

The colony of players in the major baseball leagues who have reached or passed the 40-year mark still is of impressive proportions despite the recent retirement of such distinguished members as Urban Faber and Eppa Rixey. Another famous veteran has just entered the circle in the person of Pitcher Herb Pennock, who celebrated his fortieth anniversary yesterday. Released unconditionally by the Yankees, and turned down by the A's and others, the southpaw finally found a job with the Red Sox. On the same club is another who thinks the Walter B. Pitkin theory that "Life Begins at Forty" may be applied to baseball as well as to any other line of activity. First Baseman Joe Judge will reach the two-score line on May 25.

Herb Pennock

Less than two weeks ago, the colony welcomed its most notable acquisition when Babe Ruth qualified for membership. And in addition to Ruth, Pennock and Judge, no fewer than eight others will be found on the roll this year. Dolf Luque, who will be 44 on August 4, heads the list. Rabbit Maranville is heading for 43 on November 11. Sam Rice, discarded Senator who has caught on with the Indians, is 42 today. Sad Sam Jones will be of the same age on July 26. Dazzy Vance will reach the forty-first milestone on March 4, to be followed by Jess Haines on July 22, and Burleigh Grimes on August 18, and Bing Miller will be 40 on August 30.

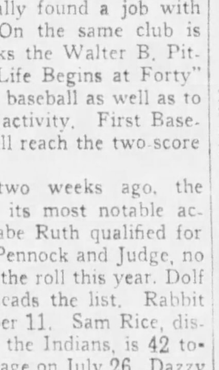
MARANVILLE HOPES FOR TALL BATTING GAIN

Rabbit Maranville, leader in long service, who still is so solidly entrenched as a major league playing fixture at the age of 42 that he was allowed to fill in the figures for his own salary in his Boston contract for 1934, scouts the theory that the new ball may hurt the Braves. He thinks that any decrease in the effectiveness of the Hub pitchers will be offset by the probability that the livelier leather will enable their mates to make more runs for them than in the past.

The Brave hurlers, Maranville argues, won't be required almost to shut out the opposition every day in order to win games, as was the case at some stages of last season, when the club batting average was around .200. Personally, the Rabbit figures that he will be able to hit at least 30 to 40 points better against the new ball. Last year, the little fellow dropped to an average of .218, his all-time low for a full campaign, but he blames it on the slow ball and looks for a marked improvement with the aid of an apple that will travel faster and farther when he socks it. Rabbit is counted on again to be the Braves' regular keystone sacker, though Manager Bill McKechnie plans to give Joe Gyselman a thorough trial at second base in training camp.

DODGERS AIMING TO MAKE TERRY SORRY

The razzing that Bill Terry gave Max Carey and the Dodgers recently, when he asked in a published interview if Brooklyn still held membership in the National League, has revived the old Giant Dodger feud. The rivalry between the clubs is hot enough at any time, and is by no means a publicity stunt. The Giants are hated in Brooklyn, and players as well as fans are vowing they will make Terry regret his remark. Even the usually mild-mannered Johnny Frederick is predicting the Dodgers will humble the world champions from their first exhibition game in Orlando on March 29, right through the season. Otto Miller says the Brooklyn pitchers will work out of turn and do anything else to beat the Giants.



Johnny Frederick

The club owners should worry. This new outbreak of the ancient bitterness between Greater New York's two National League teams means fattened gate receipts when the rivals clash. Years ago, the late Charles H. Ebbets admitted that 22 games annually with the Giants paid the Brooklyn club's expenses for the entire season. Wilbert Robinson's ability to beat the Giants consistently was one of the main reasons for his long-enduring Brooklyn popularity. He won pennants in 1916 and 1920 largely because his teams could trim New York. In each of those seasons the Dodgers took 15 games out of 22 from the Giants. Last year, when New York won 14 out

M'GRAW SHOWS GAIN IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The condition of John J. McGraw, retired manager of the New York Giants National League Baseball Club, was reported as "somewhat improved" today.

Drs. L. B. Chapman and E. L. Kellogg issued the following bulletin from New Rochelle Hospital where the 60-year-old baseball strategist is confined, suffering from uremic poisoning:

"The patient passed a comfortable night. He slept well, with occasional restless periods. Is less stuporous. General condition somewhat improved, temperature, 103; pulse 90."

McGraw was taken to the hospital last Friday suffering from uremia, a kidney ailment, and most of yesterday and early last night he was reported in a coma.

Only two persons were permitted to see McGraw yesterday. They were his wife and Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants.

LACROSSE GAME POSTPONED

By CARL W. SHATTO

Because of difficulties which the American and International Lacrosse Association has met in getting the Indians across the Canadian border, the game between the Redskins and the Yellow Jackets, scheduled here tonight, has been postponed until Friday.

When the Indians checked out of Buffalo and adopted Detroit as their new home city, about a week ago, they failed to notify immigration officials of the change. The bond which they had posted at the border when invading the United States to open the association season has been lifted, and it is because the bond tangle still has not been unraveled that the Jackets-Indians game scheduled in Detroit last Sunday night, as well as their fray carded here tonight, was postponed.

After clashing here Friday the Jackets will go to Chicago, to meet the White Sox there Sunday night, and the Indians will go to their new home, Detroit, to make their belated debut against the Chicago Blue Ribbons on Saturday.

Former Gridder Reported Missing

Disappearance of Thomas Gallagher, 22, former varsity football player at Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., was reported to the Missing Persons Bureau today by his sister, Miss Anna Gallagher, 6334 Howe street.

Gallagher came to Pittsburgh three weeks ago to live with his sister and attend Duquesne University. He left home yesterday to pay a small bill and was last seen in Sheridan avenue, East Liberty, at 5:30 p. m.; his sister reported. He was carrying $150 in his pocket.

Swift in Hospital With Mouth Ailment

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Bill Swift, Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, is in a hospital and doubt is expressed whether he can accompany his battery mates to their spring training camp at Paso Robles, Cal., next Monday.

Swift was removed to the hospital yesterday to undergo treatment for a series of mouth hemorrhages. His condition is not regarded as serious.

The hemorrhages followed a tooth extraction last week.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A "SOUTHPAW" RAILROAD—During the nineteenth century, when most American railroads were getting their start, many of the roads operated "left handed" on double tracks instead of "right handed," as they do today. This was because many of them were financed by Dutch and English capital and constructed by foreign engineers, who were schooled in lefthand operation. However, when the change was made to righthand operation on other roads, the Chicago and Northwestern didn't find sufficient reasons for changing, and today it is the only road in America that operates its trains in this manner. There are advantages and disadvantages to both system, but, due to the millions of dollars' expense that would be necessary to change systems today—signals, sidings, etc.—the Northwestern will continue to be completely left-handed.

Kid Hard Luck, who has been pummelling the Carnegie Tech basketball forces about unmercifully this campaign, has landed another hard wallop on the staggering Tartans. Not satisfied with having removed Capt. Lou Jagnow, Macalka and Ewalt from the scene of action, the Kid handed Ted Rigg, star guard, an ankle sprain in the Wash-Jeff game Saturday night, rendering him an almost certain hors-de-combat bet for tonight's game at Beaver Falls with Geneva.

The Tartans, who broke even in their two battles of last week, with Penn State and the Presidents, must beard the dangerous Covenanters in their, the Covey's den, tonight. The contest originally was scheduled for Pittsburgh, with the first game, won by Geneva here, billed for Beaver Falls, but a conflict in dates between Geneva and Beaver Falls High School forced the shift.

MAY SEE ACTION

Rigg may be able to get into the action tonight, but he cannot be counted upon as a starter, Trainer Bert Munhall announced from three seats at the Celtic-Jewell game last night that the injured member was reacting to the treatment he had prescribed and that Ted had reported last evening that he was able to get about fairly well.

It is doubtful if even the presence of Rigg in the lineup will help the Tartans much toward winning over Geneva. The Covenanters rate about fourth in the district in point of class, and with Ginsberg and Littell hitting, are capable of giving any team a fight.

In the absence of Rigg, Acting Capt. George Silverman will move back to a guard and Charley Spisak start at forward. Gibson will be paired with him, Edelblut will go at center, and Fred Freedel at the other guard position.

C. HUGHES ON BENCH

Don McCamant, Russ Ochsenhirt and Charley Hughes will make their farewell appearances as varsity basketballers in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion tomorrow night as the Panthers meet Westminster's crack Titan outfit. Hughes may make an appearance, but he will not play. He's still suffering from a severe cold which kept him out of the Notre Dame game at South Bend last Saturday and, in deed, he'll be lucky if he even gets to see the contest.

With Charley definitely out of action, the same lineup that was used against Notre Dame will start the game tomorrow. Said combination consists of Ted Roderick and Skip Hughes at forwards, Cribbs at center and McCamant and Ochsenhirt at the guards. This combination clicked Saturday, and if you don't think so, write Mr. George Keegan, in care of Notre Dame University. Address him as basketball coach.

The Pitt-Westminster clash is not attracting any more attention than is the individual duel between Claire Cribbs and Wes Bennett, the pivot stars of the rival teams. The boys may be depended upon not to spare the bosses.

The Allegheny Mountain Association's indoor track and field championships will get under way tomorrow night in the Pitt track house and will be concluded Thursday evening. The attendance to-

The City Handball League class A title chase, already extended a week beyond the scheduled deadline, will be protracted until March 10, according to announcement from loop headquarters. Decision of Chairman Rem Houck's executive committee in session at the Y. M. H. A. Sunday awarded one singles and one doubles tussle remaining of the Y. M. H. A.-Keystone A. C. match to the Bellefielders by default, the Downtown Y. M. C. A., the Keystone, and the Y. M. H. A. being thus hurled into three-way snarl requiring play-off competition to determine the victor in quest for the championship laurels annexed a year ago by Y. M. H. A.

Circuit Secretary Dick Koubek accordingly released late yesterday word that the crown will hinge on result of a round robin series wherein each of the deadlocked leaders will engage each of its rivals in scrimmage on neutral courts. Y. M. C. A. and Keystone A. C. will start the proceeding with combat at the Y. M. H. A. next Sunday. On Saturday, March 3, Y. M. C. A. and Y. M. H. A. will clash in the Keystone bailiwick. The jousting will terminate on Saturday, March 10, with Y. M. H. A. taking on Keystone at the Downtown Y.

Tentative dates also have been set for Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U., handball titular tournaments. The Junior A. M. A. singles event will get under way at the Y. M. H. A. on Monday, March 12, with the doubles beginning in the same domain a week later, March 19. The Senior A. M. A. conclave has been awarded to the K. A. C., the man-to-man division being slated for hostilities the week of Saturday, March 24, with the dual affair to be inaugurated on March 31.

A general jamboree will bring together all handballers of the district at the K. A. C. on Tuesday, April 17.

The second P. A. A.-Keystone A. C. inter-club sports session of the winter is carded for the Winged Head clubhouse tonight.

SOUTH, CONNELLEY CLASH FOR SCHOOL TITLE

WIN TO CLINCH LAURELS FOR ORIOLES

By JULIUS LEVIN

The attention of the local scholastic basketball enthusiasts will be focused on the South Side Market House floor this afternoon when South High School's Orioles, defending champions in the City League, clash with the Connelley Trade School Trojans in a contest which may decide the winner of the Section I crown.

While the Orioles will be striving for their twenty-fourth straight City League victory, the Trojans will be out to get revenge for a setback suffered at their hands earlier in the season and at the same time move into a deadlock for first place.

OUT FOR REVENGE

The Connelley passers have suffered only one defeat this season and that was inflicted by the Orioles right on the Trojan's own court. Johnny Dickson's Traders are confident they will turn the tables on the South Siders, thereby breaking a local winning streak that has extended over two seasons.

Undefeated in nine games so far this season, the Orioles can clinch the Section I crown by taking the Connelley passers into camp this afternoon. If Connelley scores a victory, the two teams will be deadlocked for the top position.

The contest brings together two evenly matched teams. The rival centers of the teams, Evanowski, of Connelley, and Spotovich, of South, are expected to put up a sterling battle. Both are towering athletes and fine shots. Their play in the first game was one of the highlights and both will bear watching this afternoon.

STARS IN LINEUP

Assisting Evanowski on the Counelley attack will be Eddie Stroloski and Eddie Sobehart, two of the best performers in the Section I chase. Spotovich will have in his supporting cast Eddie Milkovich, Joe Galiszewski, Clipper Miskevics and Eddie Czlapinski.

In other Section I games listed for disposal today, Fifth Avenue invades Schenley and Allderdice goes to Westinghouse.

Over in Section II, Perry, the defending champion, strives to advance a step nearer towards the retention of its crown. Perry needs two victories to sew up the Section II toga. A triumph over Allegheny Vocational today and another over Carrick Friday will give the Smith passers their second straight Section II championship.

Other games in Section II will find Langley at Oliver and Allegheny at South Hills.

GRAPHIC GOLF

PLAYING INTO THE WIND

British seaside links, where the wind wreaks havoc with golf balls, often have been the bane of numerous American golfers. It would seem then that advice on playing wind shots by one of the greatest of British golfers should have quite a bit of weight. Whereas the average golfer often mistakenly tees the ball low in playing into the wind in the hope of keeping the ball down, Ted Ray advocates a reverse procedure. His policy is to tee high under such circumstances, not more than one inch, with the ball nearer the right foot. The ball should be hit a descending blow and hit hard. The effect of the wind will raise the ball and it will travel straight for a hundred or so yards, then, rising gradually, will continue onward for a considerable distance. The downward blow gives the ball a boring consistency and eliminates the possibility of hitting under the ball, one of the usual hazards of the high tee.

LAYTON WINS OVER HOPPE

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Once again the word has gone out that Johnny Layton, the former Sedalia (Mo.) carpenter, wrestler, fighter and what-not, is the man to beat for the world three cushion billiard championship.

Hungry for the title he has held 10 times, but which has evaded his bull-dog type of play since 1930, Layton was tied today for first place with the youthful J. N. Bozeman, of Vallejo, Cal. Each has won seven games in eight matches.

The Missourian rose to new heights last night as he again proved to be the jinx of Willie Hoppe, seeking the only billiard title he has never held. The score was 50 to 46.

Layton was on the schedule again today with Allen Hall, conqueror of Welker Cochran in a surprise upset yesterday.

COX ACCEPTS NEW SOFTBALL POSITION

A new commissioner for the Pittsburgh district in charge of softball leagues and tournaments will have to be named as a result of the decision of Steve Cox, local sportsman, to resign that berth to accept the commissionership of the semi-pro end of the new game.

Steve Cox

Cox, who also is president of the Pittsburgh Umpires' Association and treasurer of the Greater Pittsburgh Amateur Baseball Commission, made the decision at the National Baseball Federation meeting in Detroit, where he was offered the new portfolio by the National Softball Association. In order to accept it, Steve had to sever his official connection as commissioner of the Amateur Softball Association of America, recently announced.

TO AID TOURNEY

The National Association goes in for organizing leagues on a semi-professional basis, and Cox's duties will be to build up this phase of the sport throughout the counties of Western Pennsylvania. At the same time, he will continue his interest in the amateur teams and leagues and will lend every assistance possible to the mammoth elimination tournament for amateurs which will be staged by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in conjunction with the national tournament at the World Fair in Chicago under the auspices of the Chicago American, a Hearst newspaper. Hearst papers throughout the country are co-operating in their districts and will send their winning Class A teams to the Fair for the finals. Complete details are being worked out and will be announced later.

TOURNEY IN MAY

The tournament is slated to get under way late in May or early in June. There will be classifications for senior and junior players, embracing church, industrial, playground and other leagues, and also an elimination for girls' teams.

Entries will be made direct to the Sun-Telegraph through printed entry blanks, and all teams will have to be sanctioned by the commissioner.

A new commissioner for the Pittsburgh district amateur teams will be announced from headquarters in Chicago within a few days.

A squad of City Amateur Hockey League players, exclusive of members of the Duquesne and Carnegie Tech teams, has been selected to meet the Nichols Hockey Club, of Buffalo, N. Y., at Duquesne Garden next Monday night.

The Nichols team has lost but one game so far this season, and numbers among its victims Syracuse and Colgate universities, the Marine Hockey Club, Niagara Falls and Point Colbourne, Ont.

The scheduling of the All-Stars and Nichols game has necessitated the shifting of the league schedule. The Tech-Pirates game will be played next Wednesday as part of a double-header, instead of on Monday as scheduled. The following players will compose the local squad:

Jackie Powell, J. McSorley, Tyson and Schooley, Morgans; McCutcheon, D. Scully, Connelley, Rodenbaugh and McGovern, Pirates; Lockhart and Gibson, Red Ravens and Briggs, D. Battle and Curl, of the Webers.

In last night's game, the Pirates downed Duquesne University, 7 to 1, with comparative ease. The victors put the game on ice with a scoring spree in the second period that netted three goals. The lineup:

Pirates—7.		Duquesne—1.
Rodenbaugh	G.	McNally
McCutcheon	L. D.	J. Thompson

CURRY ELEVEN MAY PROFIT FROM LOSS

By TOM BIRKS

There is a feeling prevalent in local soccer circles that the defeat of the Curry eleven in the Western semi-final of the National challenge cup competition at St. Louis Sunday may not have been for naught. Curry assimilated a lesson in scientific soccer and may profit thereby.

Since the passing of the Braddock and Homestead Steel teams a decade ago, soccer football in this district has degenerated into a strictly kick and rush business, designated by many not familiar with soccer, as the American style.

To a certain extent this style gained many friends among the newcomers to soccer football, but not among the players of former years, who learned their soccer on a scientific basis.

This slam-bang soccer beat many teams and local managers could not be induced to change. Arden's great success a decade ago was mainly through the teamplay of Jaap, Brady and Bookie in the front line. The halfbacks never wasted a kick, but for 10 years this district has been without any players as clever as these boys.

Local soccer critics felt that Curry could only hope to keep down the score at St. Louis. Nilson, Gonsalves, McNab, Roe and McLean, the St. Louis forward line, play together well. And, according to the local players themselves, they were physically tired trying to figure out the moves.

RICE SCORES ACE

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Grantland Rice, sports writer, made the second hole in one of his career yesterday as he warmed up at the Phoenix Country Club for an invitation tourney to open Thursday. He shot an ace on the 220-yard eighth hole.

TILDEN, VINES SWEEP OPENING TEST WITH FRENCH STARS

12,000 SEE U. S. NETTERS SCORE WINS

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—In a five-hour tennis battle that lasted until 1 o'clock this morning, the United States professional combination of Big Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines emerged with a clean sweep of three matches with the visiting French team of Henri Cochet and Martin Plaa.

Vines conquered Cochet, his former Davis Cup rival, for the fourth consecutive time in his amateur-pro career by scores of 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, in the featured singles match after Tilden disposed of Plaa, 6-4, 6-3, 11-9. The Americans then combined to capture a marathon doubles match, 6-1, 1-6, 12-10, 6-0.

The sweep clinched the first of the Franco-American series of team contests, modeled along Davis Cup lines, regardless of the outcome of the remaining two matches tomorrow night, when Vines opposes Plaa and Tilden renews his rivalry with Cochet.

A crowd of 12,000 cash customers braved stormy weather and contributed to gross receipts of $18,796.14, but there were only a handful left when the weary Frenchmen finally succumbed to the heavy-hitting American pair.

The visitors, making their professional debut in this country, were lucky to capture as many as two sets out of the 11 played. For the most part they were on the defensive and unable to handle with any consistency the bombardment of the Americans, which was as strong at the finish as it was at the start. Vines was the most erratic, but also the most spectacular of the quartet in both singles and doubles.

DUKES BEAT VILLANOVA

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Making excellent use of its height and taking advantage of every opportunity, Duquesne University's basketball varsity defeated Villanova College, 36 to 25, here last night.

Duquesne spurted in the last two minutes of the first half to overtake Villanova, which had set the pace from the opening whistle, and at the intermission the Dukes held a 13-to-10 advantage.

Birch, forward and spearhead of the Dukes' attack, was held without a field goal in the first half, but scored four two-pointers in the second and added two fouls to top his team in scoring with 10 points. The lineup:

SPORTS COMMENT

of 22, was the first since 1928 in which the Giants took the season's series.

HAMAS BANS FIGHT GAME FOR HIS SON

Lifted right into the circle of heavyweight championship contenders by the victory in which he smashed the attempted comeback of Max Schmeling, Steve Hamas admits that the ring has brought him a snug bank account in four years of professional action and put him in line for greater wealth in his bouts to come. The former Penn State athlete isn't blind to the fame and money he has won with the padded mitts. But he won't let the fight game go any farther in his own family if he can prevent it. Though his son, Steve, Jr., is only one year old, a fistic career for him is definitely out already by parental decree. Steve, Sr., says he never will permit the boy to follow in his footsteps, "If he ever shows any signs of going into the ring as a business, I'll break his legs," the conqueror of Schmeling declares.

Mrs. Hamas is equally opposed to professional boxing as a career for the younger Hamas when he grows up. She never has watched her husband fight. Once, before they were married, she was persuaded to attend a bout in Brooklyn between Steve and Ted Sandwina. She left after the first round, and now always waits at her hotel until her husband's bouts are over, declining even to listen to radio broadcasts of his fights. But she admits it's a struggle.

ICE DEMANDS QUICKER THINKING THAN GRID

Frank Frederickson, who was manager and center of Pittsburgh's hockey team just before this city dropped out of the National League, and who is now coach of Princeton's pucksters, has four Tiger football players on his ice squad. They are Art Lane, Pen Holsapple, Ken Willis and Gil Lea. Frederickson, however, doesn't regard football as good training for hockey except as a physical conditioner. He points out that hockey calls on different muscles and demands quicker thinking than is required on the gridiron.

Frank Frederickson

In football, the former local leader says, most of the plays are run off in prearranged orthodox fashion, whereas hockey, on the other hand, develops new situations constantly. Possession of the puck changes frequently, and decisions must be made and carried out on the spur of the moment. Size is not so important, according to Frank, if the player has brains. Frederickson says he has found that college players are a bit higher mentally than the big-time professionals, even though their hockey abilities are below par on a comparative basis. But he observes that collegiate icers in this country have improved no end in the last few years, and predicts that a couple more seasons will see a few of them qualifying for National League jobs. College hockey had its Eastern debut in this country in 1897, following an ice polo game between Harvard and Brown in 1896. It was first elevated to the ranking of a major sport at Harvard in 1913.

W. PA. AMATEUR BOXERS WIN

A team of Western Pennsylvania amateur boxers successfully turned back the invasion of an array of New Jersey simon-pures at Motor Square Garden last night, the district stars winning 10 of the 16 bouts.

The teams were divided into two squads of eight boxers each, and each of the West Penn squads won five bouts.

Only two knockouts were recorded both being credited to Western Pennsylvanians. The first kayo was recorded by Billy Soose, of Farrell, who won by a technical knockout over Riley Martin in the 126-pound class, and the other by William Wassill, P. V. A. C., 160-pounder, who stopped Carmen Gagliardi in the second round. The summary:

ADLER COMETS UNDEFEATED

Undefeated in 25 successive games this season and boasting a five-year record of 111 victories and only 10 setbacks, the Adler Comets, of Duquesne, are being hailed as one of the outstanding independent basketball teams in the Tri-State district.

The Adler Comets, in compiling their enviable record, have sidestepped no worthy club. Rated as a light first-class team, the Adler Comets, under the management of Ben Vaniel, at times have been forced to book a first-class opponent in order to have a weekly attraction at the Carnegie Library floor in Duquesne, where all home games are played.

Organized five years ago, the Adler Comets won six and lost none their first season on the floor. In 1931 they won 18 out of 20 games, the following year they captured 27 out of 30, while last season saw them win 35 out of 40 battles.

One of the most important victories scored by the Adler Comets last season was that over the crack Duquesne High School quintet, champion of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

Among the leading clubs already defeated by the Adler Comets this season are Johnstown, Ford City, Connellsville, Scottdale and Sharon.

The Adler Comets were crowned Mon-Yough Junior champions in 1931-32 and just missed winning the Tri-State tournament at Washington, Pa., losing to Wheeling in the the final round.

Members of the team are Fred Pupich, captain; Stan Madeya, Gabby Guidos, Bill Kallery, Flash Phillips and Joe Yeseky. George Adler, of Duquesne, is sponsor of the team; Ben Vaniel, coach and manager; J. J. Jamrozik, assistant manager, and Helen Vaniel, secretary and treasurer. Women Stars Win In Net Tourney

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The twenty-seventh annual women's national indoor tennis championship got under way yesterday at the Seventh Regiment Armory with seven of the eight seeded favorites advancing easily and with one player scoring two victories to gain the quarter-final round.

The seeded players to gain the second round were Mrs. Henry C. Brunie, New York, No. 1; Norma Taubele, New York, No. 2; Jane Sharp, Pasadena, Cal., No. 3; Millicent Hirsh, New York, No. 4; Helen L. Grawn, Grosse Pointe, Mich., No. 5, and Helen Germaine, New York, No. 7. Florence Leboutillier, New York, seeded No. 6 played twice scoring two straight-set wins and becoming the first quarter-finalist.

Young Wins Again In Cue Tourney

John Young, of Penn, Pa., remains undefeated in the West Penn pocket billiard championship tournament. Last night he won his sixth match, beating Clarence Smith, 125 to 58, at the Ritz Parlors.

In tonight's duel, Ed Stroster opposes E. J. McMinn.

Names in News

JOHN (PEPPER) MARTIN, third baseman of the CARDINALS, signed his 1934 contract in St. Louis yesterday. He said he was well pleased with the terms.

The NEW CASTLE HIGH SCHOOL quintet, champion of SECTION III, of the W. P. I. A. L., defeated the UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH FRESHIES in NEW CASTLE last night, 29 to 25.

The CARNEGIE TECH PLEBES invaded MT. LEBANON HIGH SCHOOL last night and defeated the Section IX representatives, 44-30.

LEROY M'CASKILL, 17, fullback on the 1933 WELLSVILLE HIGH SCHOOL eleven, died in WELLSVILLE last night.

The New York Yankees today announced receipt of the signed contracts of JOHNNY MURPHY and FLOYD NEWKIRK, pitchers, NORMAN KIES, catcher, and EARLE COMBS, outfielder.

The Phillies have signed ED KISLOSKI-COLE, right-handed pitcher, who last year, had a tryout with Philadelphia's other major league baseball team, the Athletics. COLE, as he prefers to be known, was sent by the As to Wilkes-Barre and later pitched for STROUDSBURG.

AL BROWN retained his world bantamweight title by winning an easy 15-round decision over YOUNG PEREZ in Paris last night.

CELTICS BEATEN BY JEWELS

All the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics and the Brooklyn Jewels needed as they battled on the South Side Market House floor last night in the city's first all-pro game of the season to have put to shame the lacrosse teams was a set of clubs.

The rival pro fives, battling for the rubber game of their three-fray series, pushed, shoved and bumped, and finally got down to catch-as-catch-can wrestling (Husta vs. Posnak) in a bitterly-fought battle, with the Jewels finally emerging on the long end of a 28-to-23 count. The defeat was the first ever suffered by the famous Celtics hereabouts. The contest was witnessed by a surprisingly large crowd.

Outscored, 11 to 7, from the floor and able to pick up only three points from the foul line, the Celtics found the going plenty tough all the way. The Jewels, champions of the Eastern Professional League last year, had plenty of speed and stamina, even though they lacked the finesse of the Celtics, but in this case, the Celts' finesse failed to send the ball through the hoop, which, after all, is what wins ball games.

At that, the Rosies were ahead until the final three minutes of play, when the Jewels spurted and rang up the points necessary for victory. Husta and Posnak were so enthusiastic about guarding one another that they engaged in an honest-to-goodness wrestling match during the dying moments of the game. The bout looked like a draw, although Husta may have had a slight time advantage.

In a preliminary, the Glenshaw passers nosed out the Tecky-Jucky five, 28 to 27, in a battle that went into an over-time period. The lineups:

D.-E., West Virginia Floor Game Off

ELKINS, W. Va., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The basketball season appears likely to pass without the annual test of strength between Davis-Elkins and West Virginia University.

Crippled by injuries to three valuable players, the Scarlet Hurricane has canceled its game scheduled against the Mountaineers at Clarksburg Saturday night.

Originally the teams had planned to play two games. The first one, however, was postponed. Davis-Elkins officials said that, with three players out, only four men would be available for the contest, since freshmen are ineligible.

PRIMO'S DRILLS BAFFLE SCRIBE

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—Considering the fact that Corbett was 1 to 5 against Sullivan, Tunney 1 to 3 against Dempsey and that the fabric of all boxing history is woven into a pattern of colossal failure on the part of men who couldn't go wrong but somehow did, it seems noteworthy today that Carnera is at least 1 to 3 against Loughrhan.

It even seems more than that when you consider the fact that Carnera is training by the absurd system. This course is elective; to get the best out of it, you don't have to be eccentric. But it helps.

Without going into too many particulars, I'm thinking of the fact that I stood and watched a heavyweight champion, heavily clad in boxing gloves and otherwise something less than a brassiere, run two blocks through the rain yesterday from one training ring to another.

THE ABSURD SYSTEM

They had started out there in the unprotected end of Carter's Pier. But a totally unlooked-for and extraordinary rain blew up, all rains being extraordinary in this section, with the result that the various devotees of the absurd system scuttled down the street to the nearest gymnasium. The absurd system prohibits the use of an automobile. In fact, if you don't do everything the hard way, you just aren't being absurd enough, and it simply does not count.

Frankly, things have become so comical in the champion's camp that even the fighter has begun to notice them. He complained to an acquaintance the other day that he felt as alone down here as a man on a monument.

"Nobody gives me any attention."

He said that plaintively and, I might add, not altogether accurately. George Manley, for instance, is giving him plenty of attention. Manley is the sparring partner who was not around yesterday for the workout. They said he was still suffering from the effects of a low punch that Carnera landed the day before. But a few of those whose minds are skeptical said that it wasn't so much that Manley needed a little less of Carnera but that Carnera had had enough of Manley.

MYSTERY OF MANLEY

The latter is just another prizefighter, and, besides, he's been around so long he must be older than Landis. Nevertheless, he has hit Carnera on the nose so often that that organ has become acutely painful to the slightest touch. The touch of Manley's left is by no means light, so everybody is beginning to wonder whether Manley wasn't ready yesterday or Carnera merely said that Manley wasn't.

Anyhow, there's more than a chance that Carnera may be a little "off" the night of the twenty-eighth, and this time a little may be a great deal too much.

Bazzone to Box Windup Battle

Joey Bazzone, McKeesport welterweight boxer, will meet an opponent to be named in the main event of Jim McGirr's show next Monday night. Battling Gizzy and Don Asto are in another 10-rounder.

Matchmaker Lew Raymond is working on a card for Motor Square Garden to be run tentatively one week from next Monday night. He is angling for opponents for Charley Massera and Mose Butch and plans to stage the show at popular prices.

That other Raymond, Lou, of Baltimore, the fighter, wants to return here for a bout. He defeated Pete Gulotta, of New York, in a bout in Baltimore last Friday night. Frankie Petrolle and Buster Brown will be the headliners there next Friday.

WAGNER AT DINNER

Honus Wagner and other baseball figures, as well as football leaders, will be guests of a fathers and sons' dinner under the auspices of the Elks at the New Kensington home, Friday evening at 6:30.

IRISH DEFEND GRID POLICY

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The Rev. John F. O'Hara, acting president of the University of Notre Dame, has replied to the criticism of Notre Dame contained in the annual Carnegie Foundation report written by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett. The report criticized particularly the commercialism of football at Notre Dame and the University of Southern California.

In his reply, Father O'Hara expressed the belief that Dr. Pritchett had started with a false assumption that highly publicized football is inimical to the intellectual interests of the university.

Father O'Hara said that had not been Notre Dame's experience and he added that if it ever were found to be the case, football would be dropped without a moment's hesitation.

REDS DROP PAIR

CINCINNATI, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—Cincinnati's Red have announced the conditional purchase of Fred (Sheriff) Blake and Jim Lindsey, two former big league right-handers, who pitched last year in teh American Association.

LOCAL WOMEN GOLFERS WIN

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—Mrs. S. G. Worten, of Pittsburgh, qualified for match play in the West Flagler golf tournament here yesterday. She turned in a card of 55-55—110.

Mrs. Joseph Bydolek, of Buffalo, N. Y., won the medal with 44-46—90. Match play in two divisions will commence tomorrow.

CHOCOLATE DETHRONED

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP.)—The New York State Athletic Commission has withdrawn its recognition of Kid Chocolate as featherweight champion of the world. The action was taken because Chocolate failed to sign for a title defense within 30 days. Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association. Chocolate a few days ago announced he no longer could make the class weight.

ATTRACTIVE FROCK FEATURES NECKLINE

PATTERN 1592—By Anne Adams

A new neckline of high importance is the main attraction on the modish frock sketched today. It is created by a chic yoke and ends cut in one, and casually tied close to the throat. Adorable sleeves are tucked where joined to the new drop shoulders, and smart diagonal seaming lends added interest to the bodice. The skirt is void of seaming for a very slim effect. It would be loveliest in a printed silk or sheer—and the yoke may be fashioned of contrast if desired. For a stunning sports model, later in the season, omit the sleeves and use a cotton fabric.

Pattern 1592 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅛ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

THE NEW SPRING, 1934 EDITION OF THE ANNE ADAMS PATTERN BOOK features all the best spring styles for adults and children. Send for your copy of this interesting, helpful book and be chic this spring. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

STOCK MARKET 'SNOWBOUND,' NARROW

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The stock market was literally "snowbound" today and prices tended to freeze in a narrow groove as traders straggled in through one of the worst storms of the year.

With most suburban trains delayed by an unusually heavy overnight snowfall and a subsequent cold wave, the exchange governors postponed the opening of the market from 10 a. m. to 11 in order that many beleaguered members, living out of the metropolitan district, could reach the city.

The New York Curb Exchange also delayed its opening an hour as did the securities section of the New York Produce Exchange. The New York Cotton Exchange opened at 10:45 and the New York Commodity Exchange began trading at 10:30 a. m.

There was only a scattering of specialists on the floor when trading did start. There was a moderate rally in the aircrafts and rails. Grains, silver, rubber and cotton pointed lower. Sterling reacted rather sharply in terms of the dollar, but there was little change in the gold currencies. Bonds were listless.

Shares of United and Douglas Aircrafts were up fractionally to more than a point and similar gains were shown by Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central and Pennsylvania. United States Industrial and American Commercial Alcohols picked up a point each. United States Steel, Republic Steel, Du Pont and some others were slightly higher. United States smelting rallied more than a point. American Telephone, General Motors, Chrysler and Montgomery-Ward were virtually unchanged. The utilities were easier.

Some interest was attracted to the rails because of the apparent success which the New York Central is having in its preparations to refund $52,500,000 of bonds which mature on May 1. A loan of $20,000,000 to aid in this refinancing has already been approved by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and bankers are reported to have signified their intention of underwriting the remainder. An announcement as to the refunding terms is expected tomorrow. Freight car loadings of a number of the carriers were also said to be picking up substantially.

Followers of the aviation issues heard rumors that the controversy over airmail contracts might be ironed out soon and that the leading lines would be requested to present new bids.

While hopes of the silver advocates were not too buoyant, expectations were voiced in some quarters that an announcement of some sort on additional steps to "rehabilitate" the metal might be forthcoming soon from Washington.

Brokerage opinion as to the near-future action of equities was mixed. In some commission houses it was thought that the market picture may continue to be blurred until final action is taken on the bill for federal control of security trading.

Liquor Sales Aid N. Y. Stores' Volume

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(INS.)—Department store sales in the metropolitan area of New York rose 15 per cent in the 12 shopping days from February 1 to 14, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York had reported today. Exlusive of liquor sales, however, the gain amounted to 11.4 per cent.

Cotton Spinning Activity Expands

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The Census Bureau reports that 30,967,862 cotton spinning spindles were in place in the United States on January 31, of which 25,653,324 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 24,840,870 operated in December and 23,753,638 in January, 1933.

TRADE WINNING BACK FAITH OF PUBLIC

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—An interesting bi-product of the cancellation of air mail contracts is the public reaction, which raises the question whether business baiting has not ceased to be a sure fire road to popularity.

Mr. Rukeyser

During the downward march of prices during the depression, the general public was stunned and shocked, and naturally felt resentful toward captains of industry and finance.

But with recovery showing that our economic institutions can function efficiently again, there is discernible a changing popular attitude toward business.

RESENTED BY PUBLIC

Politicians should not forget that there are more capitalists in the United States now than ever before. After the World War, the wider diffusion of ownership of corporate stock, which Thomas N. Carver, Harvard economist, characterized as the present economic revolution in the United States. The process continued even during the depression, when numerous over-extended big speculators sold their stock to small out-right investors.

In judging economic questions, politicians can ignore only to their own peril the trend toward wider and better distribution of wealth and income in the United States. Though much remains to be accomplished in this direction, partial results since Karl Marx's time have been extremely striking.

Of course, punishment for graft and bribery in connection with public contracts has nothing to do with business baiting. The public will be intolerant of specific wrongdoing, but it seemed to resent the indiscriminate prosecution of all without due process.

There is one other angle. In letting new contracts, which constitute the basis for making air passenger travel feasible during the promotional period, the only test should not be cheapness. The government, acting for the public, ought to give due weight to other elements, such as evidence of technological skill, experience and ability to continue the remarkable record already made for speed and safety.

SETS RECORD

If some of the financiers or promoters behind the infant industry were guilty of fraud or collusion, they and their helpers who were inside the government service should be vigorously prosecuted. But, irrespective of such regrettable excrescences, I for one am proud of the remarkable achievements of this new industry. Its safety record is one of the wonders of the world, and no bureaucrats should be permitted to play fast and loose with an industry on which the lives of numerous American citizens depend.

Bankers have been cheered by the recommendation to extend temporary deposit insurance for another year. The whole banking world is rather sympathetic to this emergency program, but important, sincere banking leaders were frankly opposed to the permanent plan, which was to go into effect on July 1.

The suggestion to give another year to test the temporary plan seems to be a sensible compromise. Incidentally, if adopted, it will remove another critical near-term milestone, which was contributing to the cautious attitude of bankers. As Frances M. Law, president of the American Bankers' Association, has pointed out, the occasion for super liquidity on the part of banks has plainly passed. Bankers should recognize now their obligation to finance sound business expansion.

Lackawanna, Erie Ask 'Work' Loans

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(INS.)—The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve its application for a PWA loan of $4,666,000.

The road plans to purchase 25 locomotives and 500 freight cars. It also plans to expend $966,000 in the repair of old equipment in its Scranton, Pa., shops.

The Erie Railroad asked the commission for authority to issue $623,000 of notes to PWA. The loan will be used in repairing equipment.

Daily Oil Output Gains 12,533 Barrels

TULSA, Feb. 20.—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended February 17 totaled 2,355,311 barrels, an increase of 12,533 barrels daily over the preceding week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

TRADE'S TREND DISTINCTLY UPWARD

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Reports showing the trend of business activity were more encouraging last week. The trend was distinctly upward, and there were few exceptions.

One must make two allowances. One is that comparisons with a year ago are highly misleading, since business was then on the way to the sickening slump of last March. The other is that Easter comes early this year, and the usual seasonal gains of the pre-Easter season affect comparisons.

Of course, too, the PWA work, RFC loans and government checks given to farmers are a stimulating factor which cannot last forever.

But when all allowance for these things is made, it remains true that the business activity indexes

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of JOHN BENNETT GOLDEN who passed to his reward one year ago today, February 20, 1933.
The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me.
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary.
Each hour a pearl, each pearl a prayer,
To still a heart in absence wrung,
I tell each bead unto the end,
My rosary, my rosary.
Oh, memories that bless and burn,
O' barren gain and bitter loss.
I kiss each bead and strive at last to learn,
Sweetheart to kiss the cross.
Sadly missed by his wife and BIG BOY.

In cherished remembrance of my dear mother, Marie K. Schaefer, passed into eternal rest February 20, 1933.
A wonderful mother, woman and aid
One who was better God never made.
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million that mother was you.
Sadly missed by her daughter, Mrs. Kathryn Kurtz.

CHAPTER XLI.

I began to wonder about little Sunny Paige. Was there anything in all this hooey that the psychics told us? Could departed spirits return to wander in disembodied form through the haunts which they had previously frequented? Was some part of that little girl, which was immortal, there in the darkness and cold of the cellar, keeping vigil with us?

And then, suddenly, we all heard it. It was a faint sound, impossible to say what nor from whither it had come. But it was definitely an alien sound, the first we had heard that long night.

It was now the darkest hour of the night, the hour just before dawn. If the murderer was to come, this was undoubtedly he.

In a second, we were all on the alert, all ears, weariness forgotten. I heard Carroll, well to the front, shift slightly to one knee so that he could get a steady grip on his gun. After all, it was to him that we must look for our safety. For myself, I huddled closer to the Inspector, pulling the sacking more tightly over my head, just as I used to pull up the bedclothes when I was a small boy, afraid of the dark.

Footsteps

The sound was repeated, almost at once. Someone was working softly at one of the kitchen windows. In a moment, we heard it raised and then a light footstep over our heads.

But whoever it was did not come directly to the basement.

We heard the steps, still soft and cautious, prowling around on the second floor. Carroll, taking advantage of this momentary chance, again shifted and I heard him fumbling with his revolver.

Then the steps came down again, and this time made directly for the cellar. Whoever it was had satisfied himself that the house was empty.

The door at the head of the stairs was opened and we saw a narrow beam of light shoot down. The man had a flash and fortunately made no effort to switch on the lights. The beam flashed up and down and around the basement, but luckily could not pick us up, as we were sheltered by the side of the bin.

Again satisfied, the steps continued on down into the cellar itself, and now my heart began to pound in great sickening throbs. I'm not a police official and there is no reason for me to put on a brave front.

I was scared to death.

I could hear Anderson and Carroll breathing hard but I could not feel the slightest tremor in their bodies so close to mine.

Closer came the light and then I knew it was playing over us; now it struck my eyes and involuntarily I closed them.

Tries to Get Bulb

The critical moment had now arrived, that moment which was to spell life or death for us.

But the light passed on and I stilled a gasp of relief. This was a mighty different thing from sitting down in a newspaper office and writing the thrilling details of a murder story!

I felt Anderson's body bracing itself for a leap, and I knew that it was now the time for action. The man, convinced that the cellar as well as the house was empty, proceeded directly to where the electric socket was located. For a brief moment, the flash was lowered and I could picture perfectly what was happening; the man, wanting two hands to remove the bulb, had either tucked the light under his arm or dropped it into his pocket.

This was our chance.

With one single leap, Anderson was on his feet and across the basement like a flash. A magnificent leap, one that would have done credit to a man many years his junior.

"Hands up!" he thundered. "We will shoot if you don't!"

As he shouted, the Inspector focussed the full power of his police torch. Its powerful light fell on what we sought — the figure of a tall man, his back to us.

But his hands, instead of being in the air, were reaching for his pocket.

"Shoot, Carroll," cried Anderson. "Shoot to kill!"

Even before the words were out, the man had pulled his gun, had taken deliberate aim.

There was the roar and smash of a bullet . . . the smash of broken glass.

Carroll's gun and the Inspector's roared together at the same instant, and we heard the man give a shriek of pain as he crumpled to the floor. His revolver fell from his hand and struck the cement floor with a thud.

"Careful!" cried Anderson, whose light never wavered for an instant. "He may have another gun. Shoot again, Carroll."

But young Dickey did nothing of the kind. Heedless of his own danger, he ran swiftly to the side of the fallen man and bent over him.

Judson Shot

"Heavens!" we heard him cry in a voice of stunned amazement. "Come here quick!"

Anderson and I advanced. The inspector still had his smoking automatic in his right hand and his flash in the left.

He shot it full on the prostrate body.

The man lay there, fully conscious, with white upturned face and eyes seething with malevolence and hate. The blood poured from his right hand—the revolver hand which Carroll, the crack shot, had disabled just in the nick of time.

"Why, it's Kirk Judson!" I exclaimed in utter astonishment.

And scattered around him on the floor lay the pieces of the electric bulb—our vital piece of evidence—which his shot had destroyed.

"Why, we've shot Judson," I said stupidly looking from the inspector to Carroll and then down on the prostrate man. "We've made a mistake, Andy. This is Judson."

"Mistaken nothing!" said the inspector savagely. "This fellow has committed two of the most wanton murders I have ever known! Frisk him, Carroll."

Nothing loath, Dickey bent over and took a murderous-looking automatic from its sling under Judson's left arm.

"That seems to be all, sir."

JUNIOR PATROL

Washington's birthday is the day after tomorrow, fellows!

We hope that every Junior Patrol club has made arrangements to observe his birthday some way. Maybe a good idea would be to send a cherry cake or pie to some poor family that doesn't get much dessert to eat.

Or maybe you could hold a party of your very own, with Washington games to play. Perhaps some of your members would read some stories or history telling about Washington in the meeting.

We have a list of members from Joe Kopac, of R. F. D. No. 1, Sarver, Pa. There are 13 members in his club.

We have heard from Stanley Gasior, of 1 Halket street, Pittsburgh. You remember he didn't send a pledge in his last letter. He writes:

"I have seen my name in the paper, and I am very sorry that I did not send a pledge for my armband. I'm sending a pledge now and I try my best to help other children in play or in lessons. I like to read books."

Here is what we mean, Stanley. We only send armbands to members who have been elected the captain of a Junior Patrol club by at least 10 members. We hope you will form a club and then maybe you will be elected captain and we can send you an armband. What books have you read recently?

Suzanne Danielson, of 270 Inglewood drive, Mt. Lebanon, is another Junior Patrol member who is organizing a Junior Patrol Club. Please let us know as soon as you have 10 members and a captain is elected, Suzanne.

And Mary Margaret Gorman, of 463 McKees avenue, Monessen, Pa., sends in three more members today, too. Her patrol is coming along fine, and she is getting new members every day, she says.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to study hard and do errands willingly.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR Patrol, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

CHARLESTON, S. C., IN THE CIVIL WAR—INHABITANTS LEAVING THE CITY

Residents of Charleston deserted their homes at the threatening attack of the Federalists (1862). Closely besieged and frequently bombarded, Charleston, S. C., was held by the Confederates until February, 1865. The center of the nullification movement in 1832, Charleston is remembered for the first ordinance for secession (Dec. 20, 1860) and the opening of the Civil War by shelling Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861. WATER GAS, A CONVENIENT FUEL

Steam is forced through hot anthracite coal or coke. Reactions: C + H2O = CO + H2; also C +2H2 = CH4.

First operation (blow, duration cca 8 minutes): Air is forced through generator burning part of charge, heating carburetor and superheater by combustion gases led out through them. CO, escaped with combustion gases, is burned by additional air in carburetor and superheater, increasing their temp. Second operation (run, duration cca. 6 minutes): Steam is forced through the incandescent charge of generator; the resulting mixture of CO, H, CH4, is enriched by oil spray in the hot carburetor, cracking oil into gaseous hydrocarbons. These make flame luminous, suitable for lighting. Raw gas enters from superheater into the scrubbing, purifying apparatus which is similar to that used for coal gas.

Manufacture of water gas is intermittent, blow and run alternating. One ton hard coal and 5 gal. oil give about 44,000 cu. ft. enriched water gas with 5-600 B. t. u. heat value per cu. ft. It is used as fuel and illuminant. (Chemistry)

EYE—SENSE ORGAN OF VISION

Courtesy of Ginn & Co. (Caldwell, Skinner, Tietz: Biological Foundations of Education)

MUSCLES WHICH MOVE EYE

Sense organs are converters of physical energy (heat, light, sound, etc., giving the stimulus) into nervous energy (impulse). This is transmitted by sensory (afferent) nerves to the cortex of brain, resulting in sensation corresponding to the stimulus. Physical energy cannot produce sensation without intervention of sense organs, specialized for certain kinds of stimuli.

BATTLE OF MALPLAQUET (1709)—DISASTROUS TO FRANCE

King Charles II (1665-1700), of Spain, died without direct heir. Philip, of Anjou, grandson of Louis XIV (Bourbon), of France, was recognized by Spain as king (1700). Austria claimed the Spanish throne for Charles, second son of Emperor Leopold I (Habsburg). The Spanish Succession war ensued (1701-1714).

England (William III) joined Habsburg's coalition against France-Spain and their allies to prevent Spanish-French union.

General Marlborough, leading with Prince Eugene the united British-Austrian-German-Netherlands' armies against France and allies, was victorious at Blenheim, etc. but espec. at Malplaquet.

When Charles, claimant to the Spanish crown became Austrian emperor, England recognized Philip of Anjou as Spanish king (Treaty of Utrecht, 1713) excluding a "personal union" between France and Spain. Charles VI made peace a year later. Spain was stripped of Netherlands, Naples, Lombard territories, Gibraltar etc.

The Spanish Succession War was carried also to America, known as Queen Anne's war, England wresting from France Arcadia, New Foundland and territories around the Hudson Bay.

MR. SQUEERS' CLASS OF "ENGLISH, SPELLING, PHILOSOPHY"

In Nicholas Nickleby, Charles Dickens sketches masterly the misery of the poor, the neglect and sufferings of unwanted children.

His father dead, Nicholas, 19, moves with his improverished mother and sister Kate, 16, to London hoping aid from the rich uncle, Ralph Nickleby, a money lender. This places Nicholas as teacher with Mr. Squeers, an ignorant and brutal "schoolmaster" in Dotheboy Hall, where children are not only neglected but abused and their health undermined. Stopping the cruelty toward an escaped and recaptured boy, Smike, whom Squeers almost had beaten to death, Nicholas is insulted by his employer. Enraged, he punishes Squeers with his own weapon and leaves; Smike as faithful dog follows him. (To be continued.) (English Lit.) (12—111—A)

It's Only a Billion Or So

We don't know what kind of arithmetic they teach in school these progressive days.

But, since the world is talking in billions, they must be making the blackboards wider.

When we went to that little old red, one-roomed college any kid who could multiply two by five was a genius. If he could get the answer correct he was a mad genius.

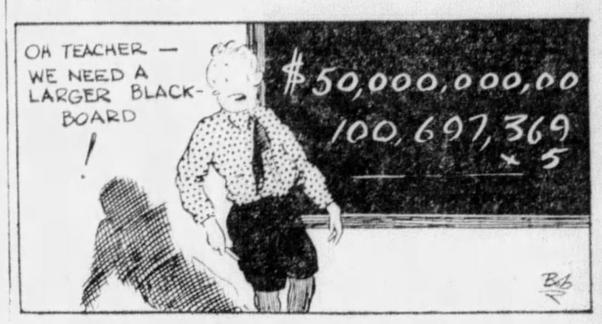
Now, nobody thinks in any aromatic terms less than a billion. All you hear are billions. Millions are old-fashioned.

Anybody who proposes any form of progress is sure to stretch the initial cost out to $5,987,342,000.

If that's an initial we are glad he didn't write out the full name.

There was a time when $433,073 would frighten the citizens up a mountain and down the other side.

But these days it's $11,964,892,000 or nothing. The budget-makers are certainly getting us accustomed to big figures with a bustle on the back.



There's nothing to be scared about. We are simply in the large money and playing with double checkers. Everything is in the king row. There's no space left for the retailers.

It's all getting used to it. Somebody figured that Europe owed us something neat and natty, like $50,000,000,000. Then somebody else figured we hadn't been paid. That was smacking a hiatus in the face with an aching void. Still, we managed to survive the elastic interim and are doing all right.

With all the money being owed to us we became acclimated to triple bookkeeping. We got so callous we could even write optimism 100 times in red ink.

We're indulging with neatness and dexterity in muscular mathematics. And we are doing so well that nothing wears out except the lead pencils.

It's okay. You will never go broke adding up. It's the subtraction that gets you.

And when your little boy asks you, "Papa, how much is a billion?" just show him the village budget and let him browse on that acre of statistics for a while.

'Advertising Pittsburgh'

Mayor McNair's Method Does Not Seem Likely to Attract New Industries.

During the campaign last autumn Mayor William N. McNair advocated the advertising of Pittsburgh as a municipal enterprise, with a view to attracting new industries.

After his election he spoke of creating the position of city advertising manager, a position that was to pay $4,000 a year.

It developed, however, that he regarded as the prime requisite for the job a knowledge, not of Pittsburgh, but of the single tax theory.

Not having found an advertising manager to his liking, the Mayor has apparently taken the office upon himself. At any rate he made some speeches at out-of-town points over the week-end and is reported to have others in mind. They were speeches about Pittsburgh and himself.

In Cleveland he is reported to have said that Pittsburgh is "a place where people make iron and steal (correct) for a living." There was no money in the treasury when he assumed office, he added, and in fact he was surprised to find any furniture.

Tax delinquencies amounted to so huge a sum, and the city's financial condition was so poor, McNair told his Cleveland audience, that he had contemplated paying the city employes in due bills.

There were plenty of "wise cracks" in the speech, and of course the Mayor's ideas about "economic rent" were ventilated. Vacant land, he is reported to have said, should be taxed out of existence to revive the building industry.

We have grave doubts as to McNair's ability to "sell" Pittsburgh with speeches of the sort that he is making. They do not seem to us to be of the kind that are likely to attract new industries to the city.

Pittsburgh needs new industries, and many serious-minded persons are working to bring them here. The Chamber of Commerce conducts good-will tours, for example. Philadelphia and other cities spend large sums for advertising.

Mayor McNair's course at home is bad enough, but for him to act the clown away from home not only will interfere with industrial expansion but may raise questions as to the soundness of investments in our bonds, which, notwithstanding the Mayor's "wise cracks," are really gilt-edged securities.

Businessmen of the kind whom we desire to establish industries in Pittsburgh are not attracted by mayors who play the clown and make wild proposals.

Better Highways Needed

The Public Works Program Should Provide for Transcontinental Roads

In these days of blithesome appropriations running into the thousands of millions for "public works," some of which are of very dubious value it is beyond comprehension that the HIGHWAYS OF THE NATION should be so RELATIVELY DISREGARDED.

The Federal system of highways is by no means built up to a point that approaches public requirements. There is an impression to the contrary, but it is an erroneous impression.

As a matter of fact the job is only about half done. To finish and rebuild the existing Federal system of roads in accordance with present standards will require quite as much money as HAS BEEN INVESTED THERETOFORE UPON EXISTING MILEAGE.

We are far from completeness or even a tolerably advanced stage in the completion of our vaunted highway system.

Improved farm to market roads and roads designed to supplement transport in and through our municipalities DO NOT BEGIN TO BE WHAT THEY SHOULD BE.

And then there is the great and thoroughly practical conception of through highways from East to West, and North to South.

While it is now possible to move from Canada to the states upon our Southern border, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, without leaving improved roads, travel in either direction involves many circuitous stretches and much ingenuity in spelling out the route, with consequent additions of mileage and the loss of time.

It has been estimated that a four-strip concrete express highway from East to West would cost $175,000,000, and a similar highway from North to South, $100,000,000. These amounts are not at all excessive in comparison with the sums now being spent WASTEFULLY and without the creation of either IMMEDIATE OR EXPECTANT VALUES.

A great deal of the growing unrest at the aimlessness of public expenditure would be appeased if, instead of supplying meaningless and useless work of an artificial type for the unemployed, the energies of the latter and the money of the people were devoted to an objective of such permanent and far-reaching benefit as the EXPANSION AND DEVELOPMENT OF A NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

And there is another aspect to this question.

Road building has been done, in the main, HONESTLY, contrasting in this respect with numerous other undertakings which have depended on the co-operation and support of the federal government.

As President Warden of the American Association of State Highway Officials recently said:

"If all the business in the United States in recent years had been conducted as honestly and had been as well done as this nation-wide highway construction there would be no depression."

HERE IS A FIELD OF PUBLIC WORKS WHERE THE GOVERNMENT CAN PROCEED WITH PERMANENT BENEFIT AND LASTING SERVICE TO ALL—BOTH OF THE PRESENT AND FUTURE GENERATIONS.

WHY NOT GO "FULL SPEED AHEAD!"

Why, WHY, WHY!

Good Advice

Judge William M. Parker Gives Pennsylvania Republicans Something to Ponder

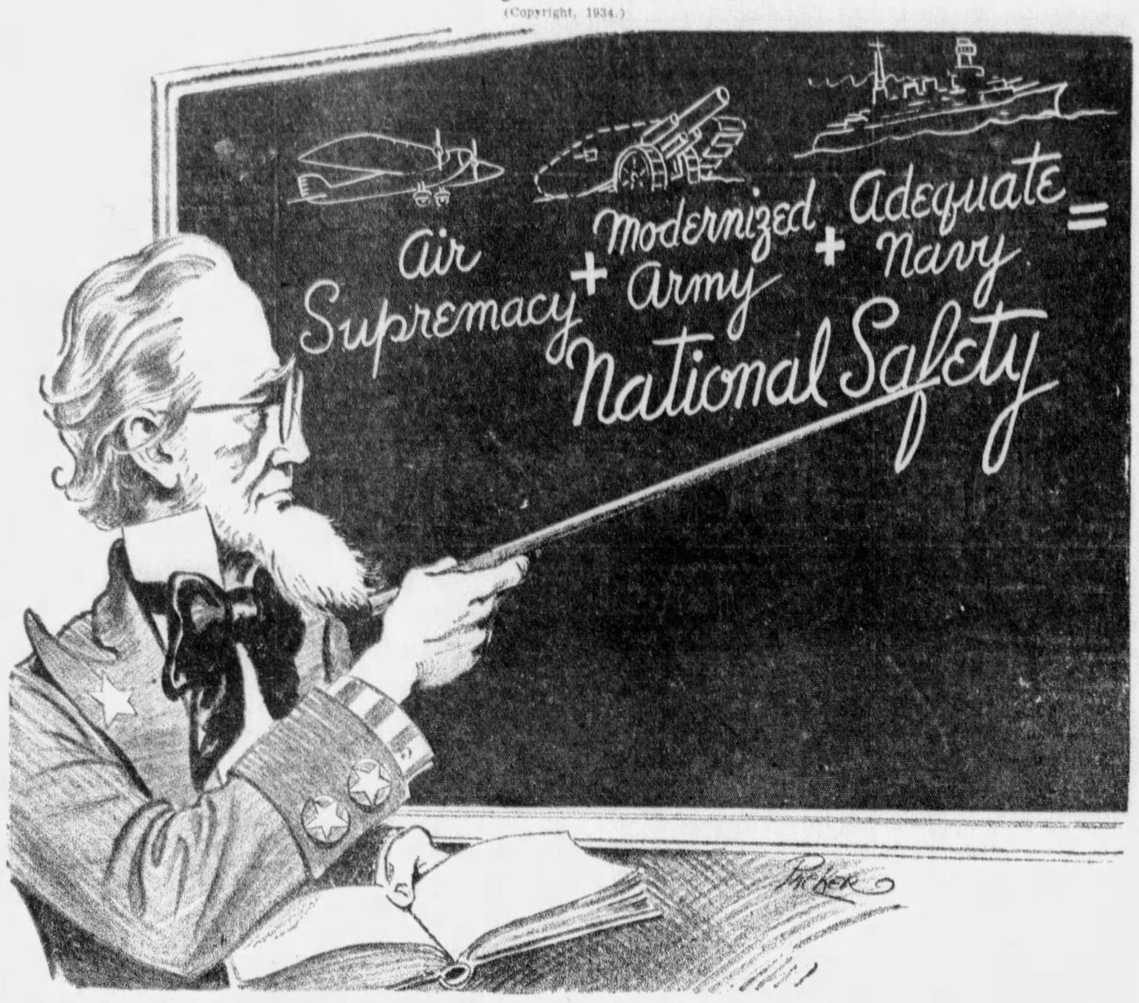
The filing of scores of announcements of candidacies every day of late gives notice of the approach of the spring primary.

The Republicans in the northwestern part of the state held a big meeting a few days ago to prepare for the campaign. One of the speakers, Judge William M. Parker, of Superior Court, gave some good advice, which should be taken to heart by Republicans all over the state.

Judge Parker said Pennsylvania Republicans had been "living on the glories of the past," and if they wish to win this year they will have to present a program of their own and not content themselves with finding fault with the Democrats.

Today's Lesson

(Copyright, 1934.)



Before the World War, America's national debt was something we never thought about—a mere billion dollars or so—and direct federal taxation hardly existed.

Excise dues, customs duties, and so on, paid the government's operating expenses. But unfortunately, national policy and limited revenues did not provide sufficiently for national defense.

And because national defense was thus purblindly neglected, we were unable to keep out of the World War.

Deeming us virtually defenseless and entirely pacifist, the belligerents over in Europe transgressed our rights on the high seas, impeding our lawful commerce and causing the deaths of our citizens—until we, too, had to get into the war—and begin improvising an army, a merchant marine, an aviation service and a better navy.

We came out of that war victorious but more than twenty billions of dollars in debt—a sum that would have paid for a century of preparedness—and for fifty years to come we shall be paying off that colossal war debt.

Dare we risk such an experience again? Of course not. It would be utterly ruinous.

And it can be avoided by PREPAREDNESS—a preparedness costing relatively little, just as the premium on a man's fire insurance policy costs him little, but protects him and his family from an irretrievable loss.

That, apart from the hardships and the tragedies of avoidable war, is the lesson of National Defense Week.

A modern aviation force, plus a modern army, plus an adequate navy equals NATIONAL SAFETY.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Arthur Samuels is the blonde young editor of Harper's Bazaar and one of the few chieftains of the editorial sanctum with real musical ability who said he had never met an editor who could hum the simplest tune.

But Samuels is a pianist of concert caliber. His repertoire ranges from his own back-room arrangement of Frankie and Johnny to the most difficult Bach. He is in his 30s and one of the few able to winnow a story or poem from the coy and reluctant Dot Parker.

Samuels kicked off as a reporter on the World and went the usual migratory rounds. He was the originator of the idea that culminated in the glossy outburst known as the New Yorker. His afternoon teas offer a celebrity showing rarely eclipsed in a town of celebrity displays.

His wife is the former cinema and stage star Vivian Martin, a Dresden china lady of exquisite beauty. Samuels was born in Hartford, Conn., a city from which he continues to register in the world capitals. In appearance he suggests a shrunken Isaac Marcosson.

What a kaledioscope of drama unfolds in a ride along the serpentine East Side elevated. A drama of windows, flashing by and dipping swiftly into a succession of plots. Hogarthian women, sleeves rolled up, over washtubs. Dwelling rooms turned into horrid factories with bent figures and pale faces close to their work. Also brighter factories where girls in dusters wave as you pass. The stipple of gnarled geraniums in broken pots on window sills. Faces dull and stupid in bleak frames. An invalid chair's white-haired occupant. Faces revealing in blurry outline love, hate and suspicion. Girls suggesting wonderment if the boy friends will take them to the movies tonight!

While H. T. Webster in no wise resembles his shrinking violet creation labeled Casper Milquetoast, he is a living example of the timid soul. A stalwart six footer, he has never been seen at a first night or public cafe during his 25 years' residence in New York. No amount of cajoling can lure him into the annual Dutch Treat show or to a banquet where he is likely to be called upon to speak.

And despite bluster of his plays and books, the impish Charles V. MacArthur is another celebrity hide-out. A frequenter of the hidden byways, he is rarely seen in haunts of the writing crowd. In California his retreat is a home in the Beverly canyons and in New York he clings to a remote estate near Nyack. Not even the opening nights of his wife's plays bring him out. She is Helen Hayes, as everybody knows.

Most one-gallused jerkins from crotches of the creeks are dazzled by the splendor of Manhattan suspenders, a necessary article of apparel the world rarely sees. Pierre Cartier's, for instance, are reputed to have clasps with cut-out monograms of gold. Clifton Webb's wardrobe is fringed with a succession of silken loops, braces for each pair of pantaloons. Otto Kahn has a jewel-studded pair, the gift of an Indian Maharajah. Ziegfeld was a lover of gaudy braces, one pair he wore at rehearsals having a dime-sized watch inset in the clasp.

Perhaps the greatest single display of flowers in a hotel suite was that for Marjorie Moss, the dancer, during her long illness at the Waldorf. Her bed was literally a blanket of fresh flowers daily. Her bathroom and parlor were also so filled that the overflow ran into the hall. Her friends knew how she loved them.

Bruce Barton is New York's champion of the sleeper jump. Once a week he entrains to Washington. Every two weeks to Detroit and three times a month to Chicago. For years the rumble did not disturb his sleep. But recently as his train was pulling out he was handed a telegram from a smart alec friend which reversed the picture. It read: "When your Pullman clears the yard, bet you can't make the car wheels quit saying 'Heinie Manush to play today!'"

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

For Spring's Return

I am waiting now for the springtime
Which I know will come again,
And I thus can forget the lusty wind
And the drumming of winter rain.
There's no promise today of jonquils
Or the green sword-sheaths of the grass;
But I know when the south winds come once more
This chill from the earth will pass.

I am waiting through ice-locked hours
The stir of a life that sleeps,
I am waiting the budding and blossom time
That is hid in my spirit's deeps;
And I know that the time is certain
When the petalled joys will unfold.
When the notes of peace will sing in my heart
And the spring will return as of old.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Is It a Crime for Common Folks to Have a Baby?

"Everyone acts as if we were committing a crime!"

That's what a worried young wife and husband told Miss Hazel Corbin when they went to New York Maternity Center to discuss their coming baby. Now, Genevieve Parkhurst is passing their question along in the February issue of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE.

Are you the complacent Average Citizen who believes, with never a doubt, that America is the greatest place on earth for families? Do you boast that motherhood is reverenced more highly here than in other nations; that we give our babies better breaks?

You probably are, and do. In which case you'll snort the idea that anyone should consider it a crime for financially insecure young people to have babies today in these United States. But don't snort too soon!

DO YOU KNOW WHAT IT COSTS TO HAVE AN AMERICAN BABY TODAY; NOT ONLY IN MONEY, BUT IN DEATH RISK TO THE MOTHER AND CHILD—IN ANGUISH TO THE FATHER—IN MENACE TO THE HOME?

The answer is ghastly, and shames us in the eyes of the world.

IT COSTS MORE, IT'S A MORE DESPERATE RISK, TO HAVE A BABY IN AMERICA TODAY THAN IN ANY OTHER GREAT NATION.

In spite of our great wealth, power, scientific advancement—in spite of our elaborate and magnificent institutions—we lose more mothers needlessly, in child-birth, than any other civilized people.

"EVERY BABY NEEDS A MOTHER," says Genevieve Parkhurst, YET OVER 200,000 AMERICAN BABIES HAVE BEEN LEFT MOTHERLESS AT BIRTH DURING THE LAST THIRTEEN YEARS. AND THE OVERWHELMING MAJORITY OF THESE DEATHS WERE SHOWN, BY RECORD AND ADMISSION, TO HAVE BEEN PREVENTABLE!

No, it wasn't the fault of the mothers, though the mother's own ignorance, laziness and cowardice often contributed to the tragedy. The medical fraternity admits that it is responsible for at least 61.1 per cent of these deaths—with hospitals and ignorant or careless midwives sharing the blame.

BUT THE ONE MOST RESPONSIBLE IS NEITHER DOCTOR, NURSE NOR MIDWIFE. IT IS THE AMERICAN VOTER—THE COMMON CITIZEN, MALE OR FEMALE, WHO RUNS THIS GOVERNMENT AND SAYS WHAT SHALL, OR SHAN'T, BE DONE WITH ITS FUNDS.

YOU AND I, AND ALL THE OTHER VOTERS—WE ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DEATHS OF THOSE MOTHERS AND THE MAIMED LIVES OF THOSE BABIES.

We're responsible because, in spite of all our pretty talk, we actually do not consider babies to be as important as pigs or potatoes.

We take particularly good care of our livestock, our fruit and our vegetables in America. We know that our health and well-being, our very life, depends on such products. So, while we believe that the various States should have a right to run their own affairs as they please in most respects, we do not leave these most valuable treasures to the exclusive protection of the States.

For we know that States may be as stupid, as greedy and careless as individuals. Therefore, we have FEDERAL LAWS, backed by vast federal appropriations, that guard our orchards from blight, our livestock from disease.

But our babies—they're different. We love babies. We make idiots of ourselves over them. When other arguments failed to move us we leaped, red-eyed, into a European war because of a horrible report that Germany was abusing Belgian babies.

But when it comes to making babies a government matter in America—protecting them and their mothers by federal laws, federal funds—Nix! That's going too far! Hogs—they're something to worry about. But the babies, bless their useless little hearts, will just have to take their chances.

No, this isn't sob sister stuff. It's cold fact. For years really great Americans have fought to right this wrong. In 1921 it seemed as if they had succeeded. Congress passed the Sheppard-Towner Bill. Under this Bill the Federal Government agreed to give $5,000 for maternity aid to each state making an equal appropriation from its own funds.

Forty-one states and Hawaii fell into line. Then out into the darkened places of our land—into congested slums—into areas where, for hundreds of miles, there was no aid for mothers—the nurses and trained midwives went. Clinics were established. Instructions were mailed. The world's most shameful death rate began to drop.

BUT, FROM THE FIRST, THE DOCTORS FOUGHT THE IDEA OF SUCH FEDERAL "INTERFERENCE"—AND THE GREEDY POLITICIANS FOLLOWED ENTHUSIASTICALLY AFTER.

Five thousand per state for the babies? Absurd! Five million for pork barrel profiteers, if need be—but not five cents for the kids! So the Sheppard-Towner Bill was killed.

And now—are you so sure that it ISN'T a crime to have a baby in America?

Text for Today But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.—Luke, x:42.

A Free Press and A Free People

THE PRESIDENT seems to accept the code agreed upon by the newspaper publishers with some reluctance and some irritation—and perhaps even with some reservation, although he signs the code.

The President makes the rather unnecessary statement that while the government concedes the constitutional rights of the press, this means merely the right to free expression and does not mean the right to print in firetraps or to publish indecencies or to employ child labor in violation of the code and the laws.

This statement seems rather unwarranted and somewhat vindictive.

The plain and obvious facts are that no publisher has expressed any desire to print in a firetrap. Moreover, state and city laws and ordinances would prevent him from doing it if he did wish to do so.

Furthermore, no publisher does print or has expressed any desire to print indecencies—and even if any depraved publisher did want to print them, the federal and state laws and city ordinances are quite sufficient to prevent him from doing so, and to land him in jail if he did so.

AND IN as far as child labor is concerned, the Hearst papers and the greater part of the papers of the United States had been crusading for the abolition of child labor long before Mr. Roosevelt was of age; and certainly during the many years that he was in politics, without identifying himself conspicuously with that measure.

What the publishers throughout the country are concerned about and have been fighting for is the preservation of their constitutional rights of press freedom—freedom from governmental control—freedom to print the news fully and fairly without government restrictions—freedom to express in their columns their own opinions and the opinions of citizens generally, regardless of whether those opinions support the proceedings of the government or oppose the acts and objectives of the government.

The publishers of the country WILL NOT RELINQUISH ANY FRACTION OF THAT GUARANTEED CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT FOR A FREE PRESS, and they have made that fight more in the interest of the public than in their own interest.

They made it for the perpetuation of the republic and for the preservation of essential democracy.

THERE CAN be no popular government without a free press to spread widely the necessary unbiased information to enable the public to decide wisely in public affairs and for the public welfare.

The Mussolinis, the Hitlers, the Lenins and all of those who seek to establish a dictatorial form of government always begin by repressing the press; because nothing is so fatal to their plans and ambitions as general public knowledge of their purposes and proceedings which free publication affords.

It is not conceivable that Mr. Roosevelt has any idea of establishing a permanent personal government of the Mussolini and Hitler type.

But some of his aides, such as Mr. Richberg, have expressed revolutionary sentiments; and Gen. Johnson himself has gnashed his teeth and stamped his feet and issued ukases to the newspapers in the customary dictatorial military manner.

The patriotic purpose of the publishers has been to permit no doubt or question of the preservation of the constitutional right of free publication to arise.

And in making this fight for the freedom of the press they have made the fight for the freedom of the nation.

Human Side of the News

The Story of Harry Orchard, Noted Slayer, Who Has Turned to the Church

By Edwin C. Hill

THERE was drama the other night in Boise, Idaho—strange drama—with an old man as the only character and in the strange setting of the First Methodist Church of the city. The old man, one of the worst killers in the annals of American crime, mounted the steps of the pulpit and from it delivered a sermon, taking as his text: "What Christianity Has Done for Me." I would like to have been there to hear him. But I would have preferred another subject and that, His Life Story. For Harry Orchard could tell one that would make hair stand on end.

It is 28 years now since the doors of the Idaho State Penitentiary closed upon him with this sentence of the court still ringing in his ears:

"And you, Harry Orchard, shall be delivered to the Sheriff and on the date appointed shall be removed to the public gallows and thereon hanged by the neck until you are dead! dead! dead!—and may God have mercy on your soul!"

Molly Maguires Active in Movement

Some years before the Western Federation of Miners had been organized in Butte, Mont. It took in all the coal mines west of the Mississippi, as well as the goldfields which had just been opened in Cripple Creek, Col. Active in the workers ranks was a strapping young Westerner, William Dudley Haywood, better known then and thereafter as Big Bill. Surrounding him was a remnant of the villainous Molly Maguire brotherhood, desperate men who had escaped the round up in Pennsylvania.

In 1905, a group met in Denver to plan a desperate deed which might bring about a rallying of the radicals. Harry Orshard was sent for—Orchard the Killer—and he accepted the commission to go into Idaho and assassinate Frank Steuenberg, who, as Governor of that state years before, had brought in the troops to quell the federation.

Weeks went by, and Christmas Day came along. Orchard stole out to the Steuenberg home, and, working furtively, placed a bomb by the wooden gate. On a post above he set a small bottle, to the cork of which he had attached a string. The other end of that string he fastened to the gate. Frank Steuenberg came along, pushed open the gate. The string, now taut, released the cork. The acid from the bottle dropped on the bomb. The bomb exploded.

Orchard was back in his hotel room, miles away, when news came of the assassination. Well, he mused in macabre self-satisfaction, that job was done and they would never trace the crime. But he was mistaken. One man, far away in Denver, read the riddle of the murder of Frank Steunenberg. That man was James McParland, detective extraordinary, the fearless Pinkerton who had destroyed the Molly Maguires, a task which had been too much for the entire commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

On New Years Day, 1906, McParland caught up with Orchard and carted him off to the penitentiary at Boise.
